WELCOME to the Illinois Youth Center - Murphysboro

Illinois Youth Center – Murphysboro was dedicated by Governor Jim Edgar on February 11, 1997. The facility is located on a 30-acre site in a wooded area adjacent to the Big Muddy River, northeast of Murphysboro. IYC – Murphysboro is designed to house youth ages 13-21 adjudicated by the courts as delinquent. Critical components of the program include individual and group counseling as well as learning by experience, personal and living area cleanliness, structured physical training, service to the community, substance abuse counseling, and life skills.

Each day consists of 16 fully programmed hours of activity. The academic program provides instruction ranging from special education and elementary levels to high school and GED preparation. While at IYC – Murphysboro, youth may earn their 8th grade diploma, high school credits, or take the GED examination. In addition, youth are eligible to participate in recreation, substance abuse programs and religious service.

The BUILD program is a curriculum-based group-counseling program focusing on four core values: self-esteem, teamwork, self-discipline and self-worth. Every youth is taken step-by-step through a process that first establishes staff control and then slowly removes that control to test the youth's decision-making ability.

Honorable Pat Quinn, Governor
James R. Thompson Center
100 West Randolph, Suite 16-100
Chicago, IL 60601

Dear Governor Quinn:

At issue in Murphysboro is the proposed closure of the IYC in Murphysboro, Illinois. The City of Murphysboro and the region is concerned with the announcement of your proposed closure of the Juvenile Justice Center in our city. Murphysboro, as many other municipalities, suffers mightily with the downturn in our economy. The announcement of a proposed closure of a major employer is a slap in the face of all. Looking at the other juvenile facilities in the state, the age of those facilities and location, most being in the northern portion of Illinois, makes us feel again that economic health of Southern Illinois is not a concern.

Governor, I know you have looked at the best path for the state, as Illinois budget woes are well documented by the press. I too must deal with the budget that I am responsible for, and am concerned that we cannot survive many more hard hits. You are aware of the numbers published by REAL regarding the closure of IYC Murphysboro. The economic loss will be severe in Jackson County with a present unemployment rate at 9.9%.

The City of Murphysboro and IYC Murphysboro have striven to maintain a great relationship. The city checks on the facility regularly to see if there are needs we can assist with. In inclement weather one of the first places we check is IYC to plow roads during ice and snow events or damage from severe storms. The city handles the activation of the emergency warning for the IYC and maintenance of the road serving the facility. IYC Murphysboro assists the city with clean-ups and maintenance including special events and emergency work caused by severe weather. We are always impressed by the good nature and willingness to work shown by the residents of IYC Murphysboro.

Thank you for any consideration given to the effect of a closure of this first class state facility.

Sincerely,

Ron Williams

re: Illinois Youth Center Murphysboro

Dear Mr. Long,

Hello. My name is Ronnie Evans. More importantly my son is Rhett Evans D82564 and about a year ago I did not know if my son would live to see his 17th birthday. My son was out of control and there was nothing I could do. Upon his conviction he was sent to Harrisburg. As a parent that place is a nightmare. Not even I as a parent received any respect. I am so thankful that Rhett was sent on to Murphysboro. In the 4 months that he has been there I have seen such a change in him and his attitude. If Rhett was to have stayed in Harrisburg I honestly believe that he would have come home worse than when he went in. I visit Rhett each weekend. Sometimes both days and not one time have I ever been treated badly. The employees there are a class act and truly want to see kids better their lives. I know there are some kids that need a place like Harrisburg but there are so many like my son Rhett that need Murphysboro. Those are the kids that are going to change and better their lives and not get lost in the shuffle of the bigger rougher detention center. The employees at Murphysboro demand respect but in return are the first ones who give it back. I cannot say enough about the counselors, the teachers and the guards who have saved my sons life. They will forever be a big part of our lives.

I feel bad hearing of the possible closing of this facility. I think of the kids like my son who need a smaller different environment. What will happen to them? How many kids are going to get lost in the shuffle and just become a number until they are released and eventually return because they did not receive the help my son did? I truly hope that someone stops and thinks of the lives that have been saved because of the attention at Murphysboro. There is no price tag or cost on the fact that the people there are making a huge difference in the lives of many. Like I said before, they saved my son and brought him back to me. Please think of the kids that need the treatment that Murphysboro has to offer. There are still many young lives to save. Please keep Murphysboro open and please allow them to keep doing what they do and saving kids and making parents happy.

Sincerely

Ronnie Evans, Proud Parent of Rhett Evans D82564

Thank You IYC Murphysboro for all you do!!!!

To whom it may concern,

I began my intake process with the Dept. of Juvenile Justice at St. Charles. Upon entering the facility I realized the world I had entered. The facility resembled a dilapidated slum, or a ghost town. I did not get the feeling that successful rehabilitative programming was the goal, as suggested in IDJJ handbook. My stay in St. Charles only brought constant fear, threats of violence, and lack of faith in the Juvenile Justice system. It was poorly regulated, under supervised, and I would say unsuccessful in any mission statement they have or would operate under in the future.

As I was preparing to be transferred to Murphysboro, I wondered if I would see more of the same as St. Charles. I lost hope that I would ever find an effective medium for change. I wanted to change desperately but I felt as if I had been told to fix a broken water pipe, but I was given no tools, and an environment conducive to failure. The experience left me depressed and numb.

Upon arriving to Murphysboro, I automatically noticed something different. The staff talked to you as if you were a human being and despite your circumstance, you were given respect. I walked into the facility and relished in the fresh smelling air, and cleanliness. My guards were dropped and I didn't feel so closed off to the outside world. Staff there was concerned with my safety, and genuinely wanted to see me succeed.

IYC Murphysboro offered to help me get my GED, which I took them up on. As we went through the process I noticed a change in my thinking. Then, I decided I wanted to go to college. Murphysboro supported me in all my efforts by helping me decide the field of study, making arrangements for me to take the College Entrance Test, and most importantly put me in the position to receive a scholarship, which has paid for most of my schooling up to this point.

Murphysboro prepared me for life as a regular person. I am much happier now. I am going to college and I love the classes I'm taking. My relationship with my family has improved. I legitimately want to do good for myself, which is much easier to attain when I know that the staff at Murphysboro only want the same for me. Murphysboro is a beacon of light, I can honestly say that Murphysboro changed my life, and without it I do not know where I would be. I cannot praise it enough.

Sincerely,

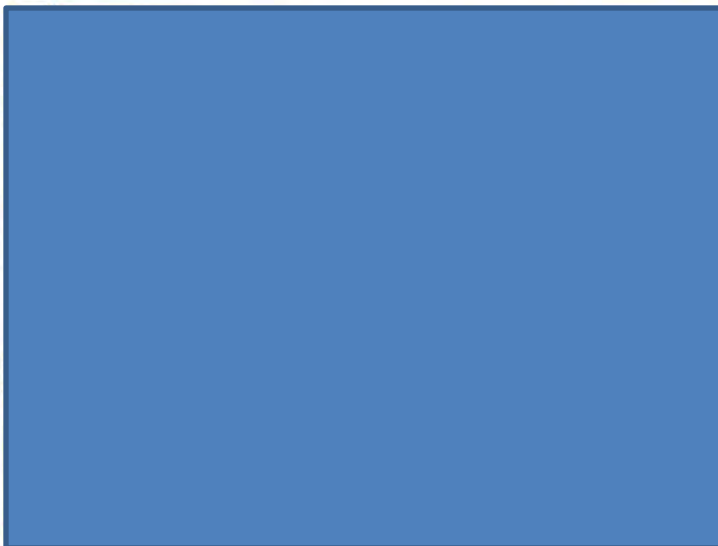

Gunner Peterson, Peoria

Education Department

IYC Murphysboro is part of the Illinois Department of Juvenile Justice School District 428. We have an excellent Education Department that works especially hard with a much smaller staff than is feasible. Nevertheless, these teachers with wonderful credentials help students increase their reading and math scores, earn 8th grade diplomas, pass the high school constitution test and earn a high school diploma or a GED. Mary Neurohr – Principal

Preparing for GED / High School Diploma

"It's amazing to me when students come to us from the public school system 2-3 years below grade level, and in 6-8 weeks we have them passing the GED test. For a lot of our students public school is where their problems began, so obtaining their GED with us was their last shot at success." Clarence McGuire – GED Instructor

"When I was in my community I was kicked out of school. If I didn't get my GED while I was locked up, I would have never had a chance to finish my education." Richard Knightson – Granite City

To the board

This letter is not just being written for the Illinois Youth Center, but for all of us in Murphysboro Illinois specifically and Southern Illinois in general. It is my belief as Superintendent of Schools for Murphysboro CUSD 186, the decision to close the Illinois Youth Center in Murphysboro along with the Chester Mental Health Center will deliver a devastating blow to an already struggling region.

Let me start with some facts; Murphysboro Community School District 186 is a unit district educating 2111 students from kindergarten through 12th grade. These students are housed in four buildings including two elementary, one middle school, and one high school. Murphysboro has significant obstacles to overcome such as 50.6% of families receiving free or reduced lunch (state average 45.4%), 17.5% mobility rate with the families (state average 13%), and 5% of students being considered chronically truant (state average 3.6%). Ultimately, the school district has been negatively affected by these obstacles as shown in our dropout rate of 4.1% as compared to the states 3.8%. To remove the jobs in question will of course add to these numbers. As Superintendent of Schools I understand the need to make cuts but I also understand that the cuts need to be made where the least amount of negative effect will be realized. Closing these facilities will significantly negatively affect the families in our region.

A study was conducted and referenced in a recent article I read. It stated that "there would be greater obstacles to gain employment and relocate for all of the workers involved with the Illinois Youth Center at Murphysboro". This statement cannot be argued. Looking at the list of sites for closure I do see some with the surrounding industry and economy to weather this storm. This is not true for the Southern Illinois sites. Our families, if they find other employment will still add to the unemployment of others. There just currently are not enough jobs to go around. You can save the jobs in Southern Illinois by closing more units in more urban areas or by reducing some other programs. There are too many direct and indirect effects from closing the Illinois Youth Center in Murphysboro to make it a viable option for our state.

The solution to save money by closing these facilities needs to be thoughtfully explored. The goal in the current fiscal crisis should be to ultimately move the state forward by solving our monetary shortfalls in such a way that we can grow our economy. It seems however that the cost analysis is being measured by political power and not for the goods of the people or the future of Illinois' economy. The decision as it currently stands punishes those in Southern Illinois. Southern Illinois needs these jobs and asks that you reconsider the decision before you.

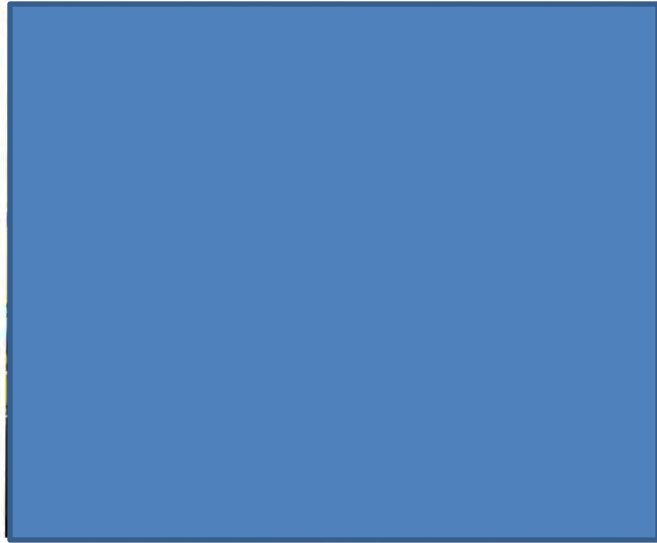

Yours in Education

Superintendent

Computer Lab

IYC Murphysboro is equipped with a credit recovery program called Destinations. Destinations cover all core subjects and afford the students the opportunity to progress at their own pace. This computer lab allows educators to teach students on a tactile, kinesthetic, as well as on an audio and visual basis. Matt Harriss – Computer Lab Instructor

Special Education

As a special education teacher, Joanne Jamieson often works with students facilitating one on one instruction. Many of the youth at IYC Murphysboro benefit from small groups or individualized instruction due to educational challenges.

Clinical Services Department

The Clinical Services Department of Illinois Youth Center – Murphysboro has several key functions within the Institution. Three subsections of this department are: Records Office, Mental Health and Clinical Services.

The Records Office is primarily responsible for the Youth Master Record File and the maintenance of that file as well as all correspondence that is intended as legal documentation for the youth. Mental Health Professionals that are responsible for the initial assessment and screening of all youth that comes into the facility. The Youth and Family Specialists and Youth and Family Specialist Supervisor are specifically assigned to provide case management and direct counseling to the youth on the assigned caseloads. Youth are seen daily in most cases and are provided with guidance and assistance with daily issues as well as any aftercare and discharge planning issues.

Don Julian – Clinical Services Supervisor

“The staff at IYC Murphysboro care about the youth at IYC Murphysboro and actually try to have a positive influence on the kids lives. I am 19 years old and try to mentor some of the younger kids in here, because I don’t want them to make the same mistakes I did. I was at another IYC facility before I came here and saw my counselor 1 time in three months. At IYC Murphysboro I can see my counselor pretty much as often as I want.” James Pritchard - Alton

Dietary Department

The Dietary Department at IYC Murphysboro is dedicated in providing high quality meals, which are both well balanced and nutritional for the youth and staff in a clean and sanitary environment. The Dietary Staff uses creativity in adapting the master menu, gearing it more to the tastes of a youth population. The master menu is followed within budgeted guidelines at 78 cents per tray, per meal.

Youth who work in Dietary build job skills that can be used in the work force upon release.

I.Y.C. Murphysboro is equipped and ready to help feed the community in the event of disaster or catastrophic event.

Bob Allard – Dietary Manager

I've been to Murphysboro, St. Charles, my counties JDC, and out of all places the food at IYC Murphysboro is the best. I also like working in the Dietary Department. It get's me off the unit and out of trouble. Jahlin Wilson - Peoria

Here at IYC Murphysboro we are always taken care of in Dietary. The food is always very good. The Dietary Staff take special care of me because I have allergies. If I had to choose any IYC to be at it would be Murphysboro.

Jordan Gillespie

The Recreation Department

The Recreation Department at IYC Murphysboro offers the youth a wide variety of activities to participate in. Activities range from therapeutic outdoor group experiences to individual presidential fitness physical training testing.

"Creating an environment where all the youth that come through our facility have an activity that they intrinsically want to participate in is the goal here"
Shaun Mulrooney – Recreation Supervisor

Teen Center

We needed a reward to give to the youth that are well behaved. We knew the state was "broke" so we donated our own money to buy a pool table, brought in our own play stations, and tried to create a place where the kids can have fun as a reward for positive behavior.

Substance Abuse

The mission of the Wells Center Juvenile Corrections Program is to educate and treat incarcerated youth that are affected by the abuse of alcohol and other substances. The Wells Center dedicates its efforts to provide levels of care and support services in a setting appropriate for individual needs while providing case management for every incarcerated youth.

Tyron Tipton-Custer - Lead Counselor

Health Care Department

Everyday I look forward to going to group. It gives me a place where I am comfortable to express my feelings and talk about problems I am having. I enjoy the positive feedback I get from my counselor. My substance abuse counselor is very supportive and always offers to help me, which I truly appreciate. Rhett Evans

IYC Murphysboro has spent countless hours performing a variety of community service projects through out Jackson County. Below are a few of the of Government agencies and non-profit organizations that we have helped.

- City of Murphysboro
- Murphysboro State Park
- Murphysboro Park District
- Murphysboro Baseball Inc.
- U.S. Forrest Service
- Desoto Park district
- Giant City State Park
- Kinkaid Lake
- Right Way Rescue
- City of Grand Tower

Community Service...

...has its Rewards

"The youth at IYC Murphysboro have been a big help to the City. During the aftermath of the May 8th storm they were a huge asset to our community. We could not have done it without them" Ron Williams – Mayor of Murphysboro

The Maintenance Department

One Supervisor and one craftsman make up the department. The maintenance department at IYC Murphysboro is responsible for maintaining the buildings, the grounds, upkeep of state vehicles, and all equipment within the facility. Our facility is only 15 years old and we spend only $20,000 per year for the repairs and maintenance of the entire facility

"The most satisfying part of my job is teaching the youth about the different trades. I have to start teaching them the very basics, and then work up to more challenging tasks. Most of the youth that come into our facility have never even seen a lawn mower, or used a tool." Dennis Crow – Maintenance Craftsman

Our Clerical Staff (All two of them)

"Murphysboro employs two Executive Secretaries assigned to assist the Superintendent and Assistant Superintendent in the day to day operation of the facility. The secretaries at IYC – Murphysboro are always willing to take on additional responsibilities and provide support for all departments."

The Security Department

The Security Department consists of 57 security staff. The Security staff is responsible for the safety and welfare of all the youth 24/7, 365 days a year. Maintaining the security of the facility is only half of our job. The other half consists of mentoring the youth, escorting youth safely into the community, teaching proper hygiene and cleanliness, teaching youth how to respect themselves and others, and maintaining control over the security threat groups. Ted Hunziker – Shift Supervisor

When I was at St. Charles I did not feel safe and the facility was extremely dirty, it even had bugs crawling around. I heard on the street that IYC Murphysboro was a safe place to go and do my time, so I requested a transfer. Luckily, they granted my transfer and I when I got here I was relieved. The security staff is always watching the kids.

September 28, 2011

Honorable Pat Quinn, Governor
James R. Thompson Center
100 West Randolph, Suite 16-100
Chicago, IL 60601

Dear Governor Quinn:

On behalf of the Jackson County Board, I am writing to express our concern over the proposed closure of the Illinois Youth Center- Murphysboro.

The communities within Jackson County are faced with the same budgeting woes as the state and the proposed closure would be one that would be difficult to overcome. The closure of the facility would claim over one-hundred jobs in an area which has been stricken with high unemployment over the past several years and would have a detrimental effect upon the community and local economy. The youth at the facility are a vital part of the communities within the county especially during our most trying times such as the assistance provided during the cleanup efforts of the 2009 super derecho and the sand bagging efforts during the spring flooding. Without their assistance neither the communities nor the county would have been able to respond as quickly as was done.

The Jackson County Board is respectfully requesting you to reconsider your proposal to close the Illinois Youth Center-Murphysboro and to take into consideration the effects the closure would have on the communities within Jackson County.

Thank you for your consideration.

Sincerely,

John D. Evans
Jackson County Board Chairman

Open Dorm Setting

IYC Murphysboro was designed and built from the ground up with the purpose to rehabilitate, not to just to incarcerate. The open dorm housing allows for the non violent youth that suffer from drug problems, poor choices, and lower functioning social development to be treated in a rehabilitative environment and not just locked up in a cell.

The open dorms allow the youth to have total access to juvenile justice specialists at all times. "My staff does an outstanding job, serving as the youths mentor, disciplinarian, and role model. The job they do here at Murphysboro is second to none." Jeff Hoch – Shift Supervisor

"Without hesitation, I can say that it is my belief that as a result of our structure of having living units in a dormitory style, it requires not only our security staff, but all the staff to be extra vigilant in their interactions with the youth" Donald Julian – Clinical Services Supervisor

The Illinois Department of Juvenile Justice Master Plan

Soon after the Illinois Department of Juvenile Justice was developed the Directors office developed and implemented the "Master Plan". IYC Murphysboro has been working diligently to adhere to the plan. Please find some interesting facts listed below.

Page 10 states "IDJJ Facilities need to increase availability of Post Secondary Education".

Fact: IYC Murphysboro escorts youth with their GED or High School Diploma to John A. Logan to take the compass test. If the youth scores high enough on the compass test we award the youth with the "BUILD" with faith scholarship. This scholarship will pay a youth $4000.00 to help pay for college.

Page 10 states: "IDJJ Facilities need to provide additional recreational services for the youth."

Fact: IYC Murphysboro allows for youth to participate in two hours of recreation on weekdays and three hours on the weekends. In addition, we also take our youth into the community to go rock-climbing at Giant City State Park, and Caving in the Shawnee National Forrest.

Page 11 states: "The contemporary Juvenile Justice standards are to not exceed 150 beds within the facility and housing units are to be smaller than 16 beds."

Fact: IYC Murphysboro currently has a capacity of 108, and our average housing unit has a population of 16 youth. Both of these numbers fall within the contemporary Juvenile Justice design.

Page 29 states "At the same time that IDJJ is implementing community-based programming & reentry, it will also upgrade old, deteriorated facilities to make them safer & more humane places for youth and staff"

Fact: IYC Murphysboro was built in 1997!! There are facilities in the IDJJ department over 100 years old.

FACT SHEET

In 1998 IYC Murphysboro had a recidivism rate of 14%, which was the best in the nation. In 2002 we were told to stop holding the youth accountable and lower our standard, this is when our recidivism rate started to drastically go up.

In 2000 it cost the State $56,000 a year to house a youth in our facility. Currently, the cost is double because the Department of Juvenile Justice has chosen to under utilize our facility.

IYC Murphysboro was built to house 36 minimum/medium females. The State has never taken advantage of this. Instead, the State has chosen to house all juvenile females, minimum/medium/maximum, in the same facility.

Since 1997, 3986 youth have received services in our facility. 557 of these youth have earned their 8th Grade diplomas, 58 have earned their high school diplomas, and 377 youth have earned their GED certificates during their short stay.

The Illinois Department of Transportation is hiring 16 new employees, at salaries up to $100,000, as a new layer of management, after the previous supervisors were allowed to unionize.

WHOA BETSY, WHOA!!

The Juvenile Justice Initiative, which receives its funding through the John Howard Association, would like to see all State funded juvenile facilities shut down and have the juvenile offenders receive rehabilitative services in their respective communities. In theory, this doesn't sound like a bad idea, until you look at the facts.

The fact of the matter is that the communities do not have the money, or the infrastructure to handle this population. Currently, multiple communities share Juvenile Detention Centers which hold these youth for a short time until the judge makes a verdict. If the judge finds the youth guilty, these Detention Centers can't get the youth out of the community, and into a State facility fast enough. Hey BETSY, don't put the cart in front of the horse! Greg Foreman – Union President

September 26, 2011

Honorable Pat Quinn, Governor
James R. Thompson Center
100 West Randolph, Suite 16-100
Chicago, IL 60601

Dear Governor Quinn:

We are writing to express our strong opposition to the closure of the Illinois Youth Center in Murphysboro. The closure of this facility would claim over 100 jobs in an area which has been stricken with high unemployment rates over the past several years. The loss of these jobs would have a destructive effect upon our community and the local economy.

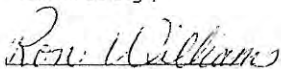

IYC-Murphysboro is one of the largest employers in the City of Murphysboro. Although not all of those employed at IYC-Murphysboro live in the city limits of Murphysboro, they account for several thousands of dollars of revenue for our community. With the steady decline of the national economy and an overall rate of higher than 9% of unemployment in this area the closure of this facility would be devastating to our local small businesses and their families.

The youth at IYC-Murphysboro is a vital part of our community; they assisted us during our most trying times. Work crews from the facility were dispatched out to help the area residents when the storm of 2009 hit this area hard and did hundreds of thousands of dollars of damage. Crews are also used to prepare and clean-up after one of our biggest revenue generating project - Apple Festival.

We, as leaders of this community, understand the tough choices which have to be made at every level of government. We have had to make tough choices of our own, but we feel to eliminate jobs during one of the lowest levels of recessions is a choice which should not or can not be made.

Therefore, we as leaders of this community, are asking you to rescind your proposal to close the Illinois Youth Center in Murphysboro and secure the jobs of over 100 families affected, restore hope of prosperity to our community and ensure job loss is not a legacy of your administration.

Sincerely,

The employees at IYC Murphysboro understand that there are tough choices to make in State Government. The governor has a difficult job and needs to get control of spending, but targeting Illinois' most vulnerable populations, youth and mentally ill, is not the solution. The employees at Illinois Youth Center – Murphysboro are dedicated to changing the lives of adjudicated youth. We work hard and run an excellent program inside a facility that is only 15 years old. Unfortunately, it is blatantly obvious to us that the Governor's decision to shut our doors is politically motivated!!

Re: Answers to the Commission's questions regarding IYC Murphysboro

Thank you again for your time last Tuesday at the community hearing in Murphysboro. We have outlined your requested follow-up information below. As always, do not hesitate to contact me directly at 312-814-0085 if you have any additional questions. I look forward to our continued partnership to transform the Illinois Department of Juvenile Justice.

- What are the anticipated capital needs at Pere Marquette for the next five to ten years?

Capital Bond Projects requested:

1. Boiler replacement Admin. / School $118,000
2. Resurface Roads / parking / sidewalks $780,000
3. Install Central Air in Dietary $86,000

- What is the estimated cost of maintaining Murphysboro while empty?

The estimated annual cost of maintaining Murphysboro are between $50,000 and $75,000 per year (assumes 20% of utilities and other ancillary costs associated with maintaining the property). That said, based on the comments made by the Office of Management and Budget at the hearing, we anticipate the facility may not be vacant for a significant period of time.

- How was the southern region defined?

Youth from the following counties were included in the population defined as the southern region: Alexander, Clay, Clinton, Edwards, Franklin, Gallatin, Hamilton, Hardin, Jackson, Jefferson, Johnson, Lawrence, Marion, Massac, Monroe, Perry, Pope, Pulaski, Randolph, Richland, Saline, Union, Wabash, Washington, Wayne, White, Williamson

- What is the cost per youth in FY11 at Pere Marquette?

$250,873 (Pere Marquette averaged 15 female youth during FY11). Given conversion to male facility and plans to more than double the population at Pere Marquette, the cost per youth should be cut by more than half due to greater economies of scale.

- Cost per youth in FY11 at Murphysboro

$146,368 (Murphysboro averaged 56 male youth during FY11)

- Average cost per youth in FY11 statewide - $88,000

COFGA Hearing for IYC-Murphysboro --- October 12, 2011

Mary Neurohr, Principal

SD # 428 - Illinois Department of Juvenile Justice

Good morning, members of the commission and all participants in this hearing.

I am the principal of the school at IYC-Murphysboro where I have been for 13 years. I also serve as adjunct faculty in teacher training at SIU Carbondale, especially in the areas of special education, learning disabilities, and behavior disorders. My entire life has been spent in the service of youth, in education and Catholic youth ministry, both as a religious nun and as a married woman, in East St. Louis and the Metro East area, in Southern Illinois, in Memphis, TN, and in various locations throughout the United States, including the youth unit at Chester Mental Health Center. My work has especially been with youth who are most troubled and traumatized, disenfranchised and marginalized because of poverty, homelessness, crime, neglect, and mental illness. In 2000 my work as teacher was recognized by the Illinois State Board of Education as runner-up for Illinois State Teacher of the Year out of approximately 900 school districts based largely on my work at IYC-Murphysboro.

IYC-Murphysboro has an excellent Education Department that works especially hard with a much smaller staff than is feasible for the unique and intensive needs our students have. Nevertheless, these teachers with wonderful credentials help students increase reading and math scores, earn 8th grade diplomas, pass the high school constitution test, earn a high school diploma or a GED, mentor students as homeroom teachers, meet with family members for parent-teacher conferences, teach these students social/ emotional learning

Testimony of the John Howard Association of Illinois Regarding the Proposed Closure of IYC-Murphysboro Presented by Chris Bernard Submitted October 12, 2011

The John Howard Association is one of the oldest prison reform organizations in the country. We are also the only independent group that monitors Illinois' adult and juvenile corrections system. Our work grows out of our belief that cost-effective prison reform is a powerful tool to promote public safety and control crime.

Based on our on-going work, the John Howard Association believes that IYC-Murphysboro should be transferred from the Department of Juvenile Justice (DJJ) to the Department of Corrections (DOC).

There are two reasons why I'm here today to advocate for this position.

The first reason is simple: DOC needs the space, while DJJ doesn't. Since its inception in 2006, DJJ's population has been steadily decreasing and is today well below its capacity. If Murphysboro were to close, DJJ would still only be at 70% capacity. Conversely, DOC population has grown by almost 10 percent in the past year, which is largely the result of the suspension of Meritorious Good Time. As a result, DOC holds a record high of over 49,000 inmates in a system designed to hold only 33,000.

Within 100 miles of where we sit today, there are numerous adult facilities that are bursting at the seams. These overcrowded conditions endanger both inmates and staff and expose the state to expensive litigation, like we saw in California which prompted the Supreme Court of the United States to order the release of more than 30,000 prisoners.

IYC-Murphysboro has a capacity of 156 youth. In the past fiscal year, it has never had an actual population of even half capacity and typically the population is about a third of capacity. Because of the small population, the average cost per year to house a youth at Murphysboro is approximately $142,000. This is approximately $50,000 over the average cost per youth in DJJ as a whole.

If Murphysboro were transferred to DOC, the facility would immediately be filled to capacity, which would be a more efficient use of resources than we see with the very small population present now.

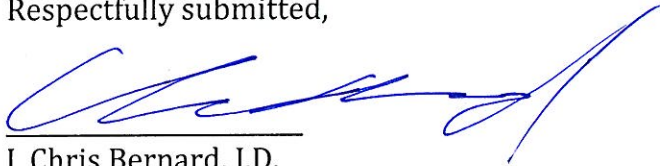

This leads me to the second reason why John Howard believes Murphysboro should be transferred to DOC. Family involvement is extremely important in a youth's rehabilitation. The average distance from their families for youth at Murphysboro is over 200 miles. This makes visiting very difficult and costly for families.

DJJ's proposed plan of moving the youth at Murphysboro to Pere Marquette, Chicago, and St. Charles will alleviate this problem. There are many youth in Murphysboro from central and central northern Illinois counties. Murphysboro is so far from these counties that it makes visiting the youth very difficult for families. Distributing these youth to the three proposed facilities would reduce the average distance. In fact, if a youth's home county is considered when determining which facility they should transfer to, nearly every youth currently at Murphysboro will be closer to their families than they were previously.<sup>1</sup>

Let me be clear: JHA's position on this issue has nothing to do with the Murphysboro staff, who I know first hand are dedicated to helping the youth in their care become productive members of society. Rather, we believe that this issue must be decided on cost-effective allocation of resources. Therefore, JHA recommends that Murphysboro be transferred to DOC because DOC desperately needs the space to avoid the inevitable consequences of prison overcrowding.

Respectfully submitted,

<sup>1</sup> Most recent data analyzed by JHA show that the average distance from a youth's home to Murphysboro is 206 miles. 32 of the 52 youths housed at Murphysboro on October 1, 2011, were from areas more than 200 miles away from Murphysboro; nine of those youths were from more than 300 miles away.

Re: Murphysboro IYC Facility Closure Hearing October 12, 2011

Dear COGFA Co-Chairs and Members:

The Juvenile Justice Initiative supports the proposal of the Director of the Department of Juvenile Justice to close the IYC-Murphysboro.

Attached is a position paper summarizing the policy rationale behind our recommendation that Illinois close one or more of its eight juvenile prisons. While the current Director and staff have worked diligently to improve conditions within the juvenile facilities, it is simply not sustainable to administer operations at eight separate facilities for the rapidly diminishing juvenile population of less than 1,200 youth.

We also note, this is part of a national trend to shift state financial investment from costly and ineffective institutional care to individualized community based care. As a recent national report notes, 18 states have closed over 50 juvenile prisons since 2007. States including Texas, California, Ohio and New York have shifted some of the savings to community based care. As other states have concluded, good public policy and smart budgeting argue for closure of one or more of the eight juvenile prisons in Illinois with a shift of savings to community programming.

For too long we have invested scarce state resources in institutional confinement, spending over $100 million annually to confine youth, but less than $3 million at the front end to keep youth out through Redeploy Illinois – and providing virtually no state resources to keep youth from returning through juvenile aftercare services. Despite the miniscule state investment to keep youth out of confinement, we have seen dramatic reductions in the number of youth committed to the Department of Juvenile Justice. Shifting some of the savings from closing one – or more – youth facilities to community-based alternatives would continue this positive trend of reduced juvenile offending, thereby improving public safety and providing more resources for youth across the state.

Attached is the recent report from the Annie E Casey Foundation, No Place for Kids: The Case for Reducing Juvenile Incarceration, (Oct., 2011), www.aecf.org. As the report concludes, there is now “overwhelming evidence that the wholesale incarceration of juvenile offenders is a failed strategy” for reducing juvenile crime.

We have also attached a report from the federal Dept. of Justice, reviewing a longitudinal study (Pathways to Desistance, funded by the MacArthur Foundation) on juvenile offenders that includes findings documenting the inefficacy of longer juvenile incarcerations on decreasing repeat offending. <http://www.ojjdp.gov/publications/PubAbstract.asp?pubi=253020>

Thank you for your attention to this proposed facility closure. We will be happy to answer any questions or provide further information.

Sincerely,

THE CASE FOR CLOSING ONE OR MORE OF THE EIGHT JUVENILE PRISONS IN ILLINOIS

On Sept. 8, Gov. Pat Quinn announced plans to deal with a budget shortfall by closing three mental health centers, two developmental centers, one adult prison and one juvenile prison.

As recent reports document, good public policy and smart budgeting argue for closure of one or more of the eight juvenile prisons in Illinois.

In stark contrast to serious overcrowding conditions of the 27 prisons in the adult correctional system, commitments to the eight juvenile prisons have declined significantly in recent years, and the juvenile system is far below its capacity. As a result, per-bed costs have skyrocketed at the same time the Department of Juvenile Justice (DJJ) has struggled to provide adequate schooling and counseling needed to rehabilitate juveniles in the eight prisons.

Even if state government were not facing a budget crisis, Gov. Quinn and lawmakers should be planning to downsize the juvenile prisons and should invest some of the savings in community services that local courts could use to respond to juvenile offenders, who would benefit from drug and alcohol treatment, mentoring, counseling and other services.

A new report from the Annie E Casey Foundation, No Place for Kids: The Case for Reducing Juvenile Incarceration, (Oct., 2011), www.aecf.org, concludes there is now "overwhelming evidence that the wholesale incarceration of juvenile offenders is a failed strategy" for reducing juvenile crime. The report documents that 18 states have closed over 50 juvenile prisons since 2007.

Illinois has dramatically reduced the number of youth in state youth facilities, with a corresponding reduction in juvenile crime. Yet, as the juvenile prison population decreases, the costs rise. It is time to begin downsizing our state's institutional investment and shift savings to community based alternatives.

COMMUNITIES SAFER

THE DATA . . .

STEADY DECLINE IN NUMBER OF JUVENILES SENT TO STATE PRISONS

In recent years, there has been a steady decline in the number of youth committed to DJJ prisons. Between FY 05 and FY 11, there has been a 30 percent drop in average daily population from 1,603 to 1,113.

FISCAL YEAR	AVERAGE DAILY POPULATION
FY 05	1,603
FY 06	1459
FY 07	1,428
FY 08	1,364
FY 09	1,329
FY 10	1,192
FY 11	1,113

(Sources: DJJ audit, state budget documents and the Criminal Justice Information Authority)

UNLIKE ADULT PRISONS, JUVENILE PRISONS ARE FAR BELOW CAPACITY

The eight juvenile prisons have a combined capacity of 1,754. Operating prisons at 68 percent of capacity is not cost effective. By reducing the number of juvenile prisons, the state can save money on management salaries, facility maintenance, utilities and more. System costs can be reduced without overcrowding the remaining juvenile prisons.

JUVENILE PRISON	CAPACITY	FY 10 AVERAGE POPULATION
Chicago	130	71
Harrisburg	276	276
Joliet	344	227
Murphysboro	156	62
Kewanee	354	211
Pere Marquette	68	18
St. Charles	318	269
Warrenville	108	58

SKYROCKETING PER-BED COSTS

The reduction in the number of incarcerated juveniles without closing any of the eight prisons across Illinois has caused per-bed operation costs to skyrocket.

FISCAL YEAR	PER-BED COST
FY 07	$70,915
FY 08	$78,846
FY 09	$87,009
FY 10	$86,861
FY 11	$92,257 (estimated cost)

CHANGING RESPONSE TO JUVENILE CRIME IN ILLINOIS

More than 100 years ago, the nation's first juvenile court was established in Cook County – a recognition that juveniles are different from adults because of their limited capacity to understand and make “adult” decisions. Over the years, the response to juvenile crime changed and the juvenile system became more “adultified” with more emphasis on punishment and less on rehabilitation. The results included higher numbers of youth in prisons providing few services and a return to juvenile prison of more than 50 percent.

More recently, we have learned from research into the development of the brain that the brain systems providing for impulse control are still maturing during adolescence, and evidence-based practices point to more successful rehabilitation for youth outside prison walls. In response, the juvenile justice system in Illinois has increased efforts to implement evidence-based practices that stop reoffending by treating youth in the community. Illinois' fiscal reinvestment model of Redeploy Illinois, shifting state resources to community based alternatives to juvenile prisons, has demonstrated success at diverting over 200 youth annually and is a nationally acclaimed model.

Illinois also has encouraged counties to take more responsibility for rehabilitating their juveniles in their home communities. The Redeploy Illinois program, which began in 2005 as a pilot at four sites, offers financial support to counties willing to reduce the number of juveniles committed to state prisons by 25 percent. The successful reduction of commitments to state youth prisons convinced state leaders to increase Redeploy Illinois opportunities statewide. If the state had closed beds as a result of diverting 184 youth from prison in 2010, for example, there would have been a $9 million savings to the state, according to a cost benefit analysis by the Illinois Department of Human Services.

NO PLACE FOR KIDS

The Case for Reducing Juvenile Incarceration

The Annie E. Casey Foundation

A new report, No Place for Kids: The Case for Reducing Juvenile Incarceration, published by the Annie E. Casey Foundation, assembles decades of research as well as persuasive new data to demonstrate that America's heavy reliance on juvenile incarceration has not paid off, and in fact, is a failed strategy for combating youth crime.

The latest official national count of youth in custody, conducted in 2007, found that roughly 60,500 U.S. youths were confined in correctional facilities or other residential programs each night on the order of a juvenile delinquency court. The largest share of committed youth—about 40 percent of the total, disproportionately youth of color—are held in locked long-term correctional facilities operated by state governments or private contractors hired by states.

There is compelling evidence that our nation's heavy reliance on youth incarceration:

- Does not reduce future offending by confined youth;
- Provides no overall benefit to public safety;
- Wastes taxpayer dollars; and
- Exposes youth to high levels of violence and abuse.

The report notes that a significant movement away from juvenile incarceration is already underway. Prompted by state budget crises and scandals over abuse in many institutions, more than 50 juvenile corrections facilities have been shut down since 2007 in 18 states. Although these closures signal positive action is being taken, sustainable system improvements will require the mobilization of a coordinated juvenile corrections reform movement.

YOUTH INCARCERATION DOES NOT REHABILITATE

Dozens of recidivism studies from systems across the nation have found that these facilities fail to place youth on the path to success. Re-offending rates for youth released from juvenile correctional facilities are almost uniformly high.

- Within three years of release, around 75 percent of youth are rearrested and 45 to 72 percent are convicted of a new offense.
- In New York State, 89 percent of boys and 81 percent of girls released from state juvenile corrections institutions in the early 1990s were rearrested as adults by age 28.

Nationally, just 12 percent of the nearly 150,000 youth placed into residential programs by delinquency courts in 2007 had committed any of the four most serious violent crimes—aggravated assault, robbery, rape, or homicide. Yet, incarceration has been found to be especially ineffective for less-serious youth offenders.

- In a recent Ohio study, low- and moderate-risk youth placed into correctional facilities were five times more likely to be incarcerated for subsequent offenses than comparable youth placed in community supervision programs.
- In Florida, a 2007 study found that low-risk youth placed into residential facilities not only re-offended at a higher rate than similar youth who remained in the community, they also re-offended at higher rates than high-risk youth placed into correctional facilities.

Finally, research shows that incarceration reduces youths' future success in education and the labor market. One study found that correctional confinement at age 16 or earlier leads to a 26 percent lower chance of graduating high school by age 19. Other studies show that incarceration during adolescence results in substantial and long-lasting reductions in employment.

REDUCING INCARCERATION DOES NOT UNDERMINE PUBLIC SAFETY

Between 1997 and 2007, the percent of U.S. youth confined in residential facilities declined 24 percent, while the percent incarcerated in long-term secure care correctional institutions plummeted 41 percent. Despite the reduced use of incarceration, juvenile crime rates fell across the board from 1997 to 2007, including a 27 percent drop in juvenile arrests for serious violent crimes.

Examining the data in more detail, the report finds no evidence that sharp reductions in juvenile incarceration cause any increase in juvenile crime or violence.

- States that decreased juvenile confinement rates most sharply (40 percent or more) saw a greater decline in juvenile violent crime arrest rates than states that increased their youth confinement rates or decreased them more modestly (less than 40 percent).
- In California, the population in state youth corrections facilities has declined 85 percent since 1996. Yet California's juvenile crime rates have declined substantially during this period of rapid de-incarceration. In 2009, California's juvenile arrest rate for violent crimes fell to its lowest level since 1970.

THESE FACILITIES WASTE TAXPAYER DOLLARS

Nationwide, taxpayers spent about $5 billion in 2008 to confine youthful offenders in juvenile institutions.

Most states spend the bulk of their juvenile justice budgets on correctional institutions and other residential placements. According to the American Correctional Association, the average daily cost nationwide to incarcerate one juvenile offender in 2008 was $241. This means that the cost of the average 9 to 12 month stay of one youth is $66,000 to $88,000. This heavy investment in correctional confinement makes little sense given the powerful evidence showing that non-residential programming options deliver equal or better results for a fraction of the cost.

- Florida's Redirection Program provides evidence-based, family-focused treatment as an alternative to residential placements for less-serious youth offenders. Redirection participants are significantly less likely than comparable youth placed in residential facilities to be arrested for a new crime, convicted of a new felony, or sentenced to an adult prison. From 2004 to 2008, the Redirection Program saved $41.6 million through reduced program costs and lower spending to prosecute and punish subsequent crimes.
- The Washington State Institute for Public Policy has estimated that placing one young person in Multi-dimensional Treatment Foster Care, where troubled and delinquent youth live with specially trained foster families while their parents receive counseling and parent training, saves $96,000 in reduced costs to victims and the criminal justice system.

THESE FACILITIES ARE OFTEN VIOLENT AND ABUSIVE ENVIRONMENTS

In the past four decades, recurring violence, abuse, and maltreatment have been documented in the publicly funded youth corrections facilities in at least 39 states plus the District of Columbia and Puerto Rico. This disturbing trend is not improving. In 22 of those states (and the District of Columbia) maltreatment has been documented since 2000.

- In 2010, the first national study on sexual abuse in juvenile corrections found that 12 percent of confined youth—more than 3,000 young people—reported being victimized sexually by staff or other youth in their facilities.

- A 2008 Associated Press story found that 13,000 claims of abuse had been reported from 2004 through 2007 in state-run juvenile facilities nationwide.
- In the first nationally representative survey of confined youth, published in April 2010, 42 percent said they were somewhat or very afraid of being physically attacked, 45 percent said that staff use force against youth when they don't need to, and 30 percent said that staff place youth in solitary confinement as a form of discipline.

RECOMMENDATIONS

1. Limit Eligibility for Correctional Placements

States should impose new restrictions that limit incarceration to youth who have committed serious offenses and pose a clear and demonstrable risk to public safety. For instance, Texas enacted a new law in 2007 allowing state correctional commitments only for youth found guilty of felony crimes, and California now permits only youth who have committed violent felonies to be placed in state facilities. Other states have prohibited commitments for low-level offenses except for youth with serious histories of prior offending. Youth should be placed into correctional facilities based only on their crimes committed and risk of re-offense—not on their perceived needs for mental health or behavioral treatment.

2. Invest in Promising Non-Residential Alternatives

States should redirect funds previously spent on incarceration to support a continuum of high-quality treatment and supervision programs. States should give top priority to proven family intervention models, such as Multisystemic Therapy, Functional Family Therapy, and Multi-dimensional Treatment Foster Care, which currently serve only a small fraction of youth who might benefit nationwide. States should also expand access to career preparation and vocational training programs; intensive youth advocate and mentoring programs; and promising models for specialized mental health and substance-abuse treatment.

3. Change the Financial Incentives for Incarcerating Youth

States should revamp funding mechanisms to increase the incentives for local courts to treat delinquent youth in their home communities whenever possible. In too many jurisdictions, local juvenile justice officials face a perverse choice between offering youth cost-effective community-based programming (at the expense of local governments) or committing them to more expensive and less effective custody programs (often funded entirely by the states). California, Illinois, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Wisconsin, and Wayne County, Michigan, among others, have adopted funding formulas that increase the incentives for local supervision and treatment.

4. Adopt Best Practice Reforms for Managing Youthful Offenders

States and localities should implement complementary policies and practices that have proven useful for safely reducing the number of youth confined in correctional facilities. States and localities should limit lengths of stay in correctional facilities and other residential placements, given the research finding that longer periods of incarceration—especially stays over one year—do not reduce future offending, add to state youth corrections budgets, and harm youths' prospects for success in adult life. States should also embrace detention reforms that safely steer many youth away from pre-trial detention centers and reduce the odds they will be placed into correctional facilities. Finally, states should limit correctional placements based on probation rules violations, which account for one in every eight commitments to secure custody.

5. Replace Large Institutions With Small, Treatment-Oriented Facilities for the Dangerous Few

States should place serious and chronic youth offenders into small, humane, and treatment-oriented facilities, such as those operated by Missouri's Division of Youth Services (DYS). Missouri has divided the state into five regions and built a continuum of programs in each. The secure-care facilities house just 30–36 young people. Youth are placed in small groups that participate in education, treatment, meals, and recreation. DYS staff engage the families to help devise successful re-entry plans and assign a single case manager to oversee each youth from commitment through release and aftercare, providing extensive supervision and support in the critical re-entry period. Through this approach, Missouri's re-offending rates are far lower than other states.

6. Use Data to Hold Youth Corrections Systems Accountable

States should collect more and better information about correctional programs and use the data to hold systems accountable. States must carefully measure re-offense rates of youth released from juvenile correctional facilities, employing rigorous methodologies to track re-offending into early adulthood. States should also monitor youths' progress after release in education, employment, and mental and behavioral health. To minimize the risks of abuse, states should closely monitor conditions of confinement in juvenile facilities, and ensure that all facilities maintain grievance processes that allow confined youth to report maltreatment and obtain a fair hearing. Finally, given the continuing racial disparities at all levels of our nation's juvenile justice systems, every state and locality should be collecting and analyzing data to identify and correct practices that unfairly impact youth based on their race or ethnicity.

CONCLUSION

The evidence presented in No Place for Kids makes clear that heavy reliance on juvenile incarceration is a counterproductive public policy for combating youth crime. It is time to act on this information by abandoning the longstanding incarceration model and embracing a more constructive, humane, and cost-effective approach to youth corrections.

The substantial decreases in reliance on youth prisons over the past decade are significant. However, these reductions have neither been anchored in a strong new national consensus among policy leaders, nor based on comprehensive changes to policy, practice, programming, and financing that will be critical to ensure sustainable, effective alternative responses to juvenile crime.

The Annie E. Casey Foundation hopes that this report can serve as a catalyst for building a new movement for enlightened juvenile corrections reform. If states adopt the recommendations and best practices highlighted in No Place for Kids and reallocate funds currently spent on incarceration to more constructive supervision and treatment strategies, there is every reason to believe that the end result will be less crime and more successful futures for America's young people.

Highlights From Pathways to Desistance: A Longitudinal Study of Serious Adolescent Offenders

Edward P. Mulvey

The Pathways to Desistance Study is a large collaborative, multidisciplinary project that is following 1,354 serious juvenile offenders ages 14–18 (184 females and 1,170 males) for 7 years after their conviction (for more detailed information, see “Study Design”).<sup>1</sup> This study has collected the most comprehensive data set currently available about serious adolescent offenders and their lives in late adolescence and early adulthood. It looks at the factors that lead youth who have committed serious offenses to continue or desist from offending, including individual maturation, life changes, and involvement with the criminal justice system.

Study Findings

The primary findings of the study to date deal with the decrease in self-reported offending over time by most serious adolescent offenders, the relative inefficacy of longer juvenile incarcerations in decreasing recidivism, the effectiveness of community-based supervision as a component of aftercare for incarcerated youth, and the effectiveness of substance abuse treatment in reducing both substance use and offending by serious adolescent offenders.

Most youth who commit felonies greatly reduce their offending over time, regardless of the intervention. Approximately 91.5 percent of youth in the study reported decreased or limited illegal activity during the first 3 years following their court involvement. In particular, two groups of male offenders—those with high, stable offending rates, and those with high, but declining offending rates—had very different outcomes despite similar treatment by the juvenile justice system (see figure 1). For both groups, approximately 40 percent of offenders were in jail or prison across the 3-year followup period (see “Study Design”); each group also had similar percentages under detention or in a contracted residential placement (about 20 percent of each group was in each of these forms of supervision). Overall, approximately 50 percent of the youth in each group were under some form of supervision during the followup period, and about 20 percent were receiving community-based services.

Key Points

- Most youth who commit felonies greatly reduce their offending over time.
- Longer stays in juvenile institutions do not reduce recidivism.
- In the period after incarceration, community-based supervision is effective for youth who have committed serious offenses.
- Substance abuse treatment reduces both substance use and criminal offending for a limited time.

Therefore, institutional placement and the type of setting appeared to have little effect on which high-end offenders persisted in offending and which reduced their offending (Mulvey et al., 2010).

Longer stays in juvenile institutions do not reduce recidivism, and some youth who had the lowest offending levels reported committing more crimes after being incarcerated. The researchers looked at two groups of cases that were adjudicated in juvenile court at both the Philadelphia and metropolitan Phoenix sites. Of 921 offenders who remained in the juvenile system, 502 received probation and 419 were placed in institutions. The researchers then matched the two groups based on 66 variables that would affect the probability that an individual offender would be placed in an institution to rule out those variables as potential causes of different outcomes between the placement and probation groups. After 64 of those 66 variables were ruled out, the two groups showed no significant

Study Design

The study involved extensive interviews with young offenders at enrollment, followup interviews every 6 months for the first 3 years and annually thereafter, interviews following release from residential facilities, collateral interviews with family members and friends, data collection about significant life events recorded at the monthly level, and reviews of official records data. Enrollment took place between November 2000 and March 2003, and the research team concluded data collection in 2010.

The study followed young offenders in two metropolitan areas: Maricopa County (metropolitan Phoenix), AZ, and Philadelphia County, PA. Youth differences in their rate either of rearrest or of self-reported offending. Also, when the researchers matched groups of offenders with similar backgrounds, they found that, for lengths of stay between 3 and 13 months, youth who stayed in institutions longer showed little or no decrease in their rates of rearrest compared with those with shorter stays (Loughran et al., 2009). Moreover, in another set of analyses, the study found that the group of offenders with the lowest levels of self-reported offending actually raised their levels of offending by a small but statistically significant amount following stays in institutions (Mulvey et al., 2010).

Community-based supervision as a component of aftercare is effective for youth who have committed serious offenses, and offenders who receive community-based services following incarceration are more likely to attend school, go to work, and reduce offending. Because the project collects monthly data about institutional placement, probation, and involvement in community-based services, investigators were able to examine the effects of aftercare services for 6 months after a court-ordered placement (the period when such services are presumably provided with greater intensity in most locales). Increasing the duration of community supervision reduced reported reoffending. In addition, although returning offenders generally received supervision only, rather than treatment, the research showed that in the 6 months after release, youth who were involved in community-based services were more likely to avoid further involvement with the juvenile justice system (Chung, Schubert, and Mulvey, 2007).

Substance abuse treatment reduces both substance use and criminal offending, at least in the short term. Research has consistently shown that substance use among adolescents is linked to serious juvenile offending. The adolescent offenders profiled in the Pathways to Desistance study reported very high levels of substance use and substance use problems.<sup>2</sup> Substance use was linked to other illegal activities engaged in by the study participants. It is a strong, prevalent predictor of offending. The presence of a drug or alcohol disorder and the level of substance use enrollees in the study were 14 to 17 years old and found guilty of at least one serious (almost exclusively felony-level) violent crime, property offense, or drug offense as the result of their current petition to court. The study limited the proportion of male drug offenders to 15 percent at each site to ensure a heterogeneous sample of serious offenders. Because investigators also wanted to ensure a large enough sample of female offenders—a group neglected in previous research—they did not apply this limit to female drug offenders. In addition, youth whose cases were considered for trial in the adult criminal justice system were still enrolled.

were both shown to be strongly and independently related to the level of self-reported offending and the number of arrests. This relationship held even when drug-related offenses and behaviors were removed from the offending measures, and characteristics including socioeconomic status, gender, and ethnicity were controlled statistically (Mulvey, Schubert, and Chassin, 2010). The good news, however, is that treatment appears to reduce both substance use and offending, at least in the short term. Youth whose treatment lasted for at least 90 days and included significant family involvement showed significant reductions in alcohol use, marijuana use, and offending over the following 6 months (Chassin et al., 2009).

Conclusions

The most important conclusion of the study is that even adolescents who have committed serious offenses are not necessarily on track for adult criminal careers. Only a small proportion of the offenders studied continued to offend at a high level throughout the followup period. The great majority reported low levels of offending after court involvement, and a significant portion of those with the highest levels of offending reduced their reoffending dramatically. Two factors that appear to distinguish high-end desisters from persisters are lower levels of substance use and greater stability in their daily routines, as measured by stability in living arrangements and work and school attendance.

The second conclusion is that incarceration may not be the most appropriate or effective option, even for many of the most serious adolescent offenders. Longer stays in juvenile facilities did not reduce reoffending; institutional placement even raised offending levels in those with the lowest level of offending. Youth who received community-based supervision and aftercare services were more likely to attend school, go to work, and avoid further offending during the 6 months after release, and longer supervision periods increased these benefits.

Finally, substance use is a major factor in continued criminal activity by serious adolescent offenders. Substance abuse treatment for young offenders reduces both substance use and non-drug-related offending in the short term, if the treatment period is long enough and if families take part in the treatment with the offender. Most young offenders who are diagnosed with substance abuse disorders, however, do receive treatment in institutions or community-based settings. Given that community-based supervision may reduce reoffending and promote pro-social attitudes and behaviors, and that continued substance abuse treatment may be needed to prevent longer term relapses, integrating substance abuse treatment into community-based services may realize greater benefits in reducing serious adolescent offending while providing more efficient and effective delivery of services.

1. OJJDP is sponsoring the Pathways to Desistance study in partnership with the National Institute of Justice, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, the John D. and Catherine T. MacArthur Foundation, the William T. Grant Foundation, the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation, the William Penn Foundation, the National Institute on Drug Abuse (Grant Number R01DA019697), the Pennsylvania Commission on Crime and Delinquency, and the Arizona State Governor's Justice Commission. Investigators for this study are Edward P. Mulvey, Ph.D. (University of Pittsburgh), Robert Brame, Ph.D. (University of North Carolina–Charlotte), Elizabeth Cauffman, Ph.D. (University of California–Irvine), Laurie Chassin, Ph.D. (Arizona State University), Sonia Cota-Robles, Ph.D. (Temple University), Jeffrey Fagan, Ph.D. (Columbia University), George Knight, Ph.D. (Arizona State University), Sandra Losoya, Ph.D. (Arizona State University), Alex Piquero, Ph.D. (Florida State University), Carol A. Schubert, M.P.H. (University of Pittsburgh), and Laurence Steinberg, Ph.D. (Temple University). The rationale for the study may be found in Mulvey et al., 2004, and the details of operations can be found in Schubert et al., 2004.
2. During their baseline interviews, 57 percent of the respondents reported that they had smoked marijuana in the previous 6 months, 40 percent had drunk alcohol during that time, and 27 percent had used cocaine, hallucinogens, or other drugs. Approximately 48 percent of the study participants had used multiple substances during the 6 months before the baseline interviews and, in each followup interview, about 28 to 30 percent reported using multiple substances in the previous 6 months. In addition, at the time of the baseline interview, 37 percent of male study participants and 35 percent of female participants were diagnosed with a substance use disorder in the previous year, three to four times the rate in the general youth population (Mulvey, Schubert, and Chassin, 2010).

Commission on Government Forecasting and Accountability
ATTENTION: Facility Closure
706 Stratton Building
Springfield, Illinois 62706

Name: Jeff Doherty, Executive Director
Organization: Jackson Growth Alliance
Relationship: Economic Development Organization for Jackson County, Illinois
Address: Post Office Box 23, Carbondale, Illinois 62903
Email: jdoherty@jacksonbiz.org
Position: Opponent to Facility Closing
Testimony: Written Statement Filed

Jackson Growth Alliance is a cooperative effort among Jackson County, Murphysboro and Carbondale, Southern Illinois University, Southern Illinois Airport Authority and the business community to promote economic development in Jackson County and the southern Illinois region.

The Jackson Growth Alliance Board of Directors opposes the closing of the Illinois Youth Center in Murphysboro. The Illinois Youth Center in Murphysboro has a significant economic impact in Murphysboro, Jackson County and the southern Illinois region employing close to 100 persons with the impact valued at over $23 million. The job losses created by the facility closing in an area with high unemployment and high poverty rates will worsen the region's already poor economy.

The Illinois Youth Center in Murphysboro, opened in 1997, is the state's only juvenile boot camp and has as its mission to prepare youth for positive successful lives by developing self-discipline, teamwork, self-esteem and self-worth as individuals. There are various models for rehabilitating troubled youth, including community based programs. One size does not fit all and in many cases incarceration in Murphysboro's Illinois Youth Center is the best option for successful rehabilitation.

Jackson Growth Alliance recognizes the financial problems of the State of Illinois. However, closing a 14 year old modern facility that provides valuable jobs and meaningful alternative programs for courts to consider when sentencing youth is not acting in the public's best interest.

Sincerely,

Jeff Doherty
Executive Director

We are strongly against the closure of IYC. My husband has worked at IYC for 15 years and enjoys his job. Closing it would be a devastating to this community. There is already a high unemployment rate. If IYC is closed, my husband would have to relocate to another city. ~~Who~~ Who is going to buy a house right now? No one. We would be stuck paying on a mortgage here while living elsewhere. People elect officials to help them. Do the right thing. Keep IYC open. You work for the people. Not the governor!! ### WRITTEN COMMENTS:

The boys we take care of have robbed people have held guns to people, have done and sold & made drugs for us. Yes they need counseling, but they also need IYC Murphysboro we put them in school and have drug counseling for them & nurse who truly care about them, and we have taken pay cuts to come do this. Counseling alone will not change these kids, they need IYC Murphysboro, they don't need to be on the streets after committing crimes against society. Please save our jobs! Janet Kehl RN

WRITTEN COMMENTS:

It appears that this decision/ Recommendation to close the facility in Murphysboro was made without serious consideration OR with complete disregard for the severe economic impact this will have on this region. It seems there are alternatives to closing a relatively new facility, directly impacting the lives ~~and the livelihoods~~ of 150 people and their families and indirectly impacting all of us at a time when ~~we are already struggling~~ ~~Regionally~~ this region can ill afford the loss of so many jobs. It also seems the employees of the IYC are pawns in a political battle.

WRITTEN COMMENTS:

It would be a grave mistake to close the IYC at M'BORO. The IYC is a great asset to the community - the workers & visitors of IYC provide much needed business to the local businesses in M'BORO. The building is self sufficient in that it is one of the newest facilities & the land is owned by the state where by costs the state less to operate than older, smaller facilities in the state.

~~where~~ Youth that <sup>are</sup> sent to the facility come out better individuals & more balanced & better to go back into society & become <sup>over</sup> adults. Most of them that come are from bad families with no parents or parents that are unable to teach them good. ~~As they are~~ ~~on their own~~ These kids are left to depend on themselves + end up in gangs. These kids need to be out of that environment + away from their gangs + bad parents + bad influences. Kids that are sent to IYC + leave ~~with~~ ~~from~~ completed their GEDS + learn ways to help the community + are better able to resist temptations + make something of their life from the discipline + education they received while at the IYC.
