

MOTION IN WRITING
TEMPORARY RULES

The Honorable Todd Hunter of Nueces County offered the following motion in writing:

Madam Secretary:

I move to adopt the House Rules of Procedure from the 87th Legislature, excepting Rule 16, as temporary rules.

Hunter

The motion was read and prevailed.

MOTION IN WRITING
AUTHORIZING FLOOR PRIVILEGES

The Honorable Will Metcalf of Montgomery County offered the following motion in writing:

Madam Secretary:

I move that, pending the election of the speaker, all individuals other than members of the house of representatives, members of their families, the secretary of state, temporary officers and their staffs, and approved guests be barred from the floor of the house of representatives inside the railing.

Metcalf

The motion was read and prevailed.

MOTION IN WRITING
PROVIDING FOR NOMINATION AND ELECTION OF THE SPEAKER

The Honorable Todd Hunter of Nueces County and the Honorable Armando Walle of Harris County offered the following motion in writing:

Madam Secretary:

I move that, in accordance with Sections 9(b) and 11, Article III, Texas Constitution, and the laws of the State of Texas, the House of Representatives of the 88th Legislature proceed to elect a speaker of the house of representatives from its own membership as follows:

SECTION 1. NOMINATIONS. (a) The secretary of state shall call for nominations from the floor for the election of speaker of the house of representatives and shall recognize each member who desires to make a nomination. The order in which members shall proceed to make a nomination shall be determined by lot.

(b) Each member recognized for this purpose shall immediately advance to the microphone at the reading clerk's desk and make the nomination in a nominating speech not to exceed five minutes in length.

(c) After all nominations have been made, the secretary of state shall declare nominations to be closed.

(d) The secretary of state shall recognize at any time a member whose name has been placed in nomination for the purpose of withdrawing as a nominee. A member who withdraws is not considered a nominee.

SECTION 2. SECONDS. (a) A person is not considered a nominee unless the nomination is seconded by at least one member.

(b) One seconding speech shall be allowed for each nomination in the order in which nominations were made, then other seconding speeches shall be allowed in rotation in the same order.

(c) Not more than five seconding speeches shall be allowed for each nominee.

(d) A seconding speech may not exceed three minutes in length.

SECTION 3. VOTING PROCEDURES; VOTING MACHINE. (a) All votes shall be record votes, taken using the voting machine, with the vote of each member entered in the House Journal.

(b) If there are two or three nominees for speaker, the members shall record their votes from their desks on the voting machine with a different colored light on the machine indicating a vote for each nominee. If the nominees cannot agree on the color that will indicate a vote for each nominee, the presiding officer shall draw lots to determine the color for each nominee.

(c) Before the close of voting on the voting machine, the presiding officer shall provide several warnings to the members that the voting period is about to close.

(d) A member who does not cast a vote for a nominee but who was recorded as present at the initial roll call shall be recorded as "present, not voting" in the record of the vote.

SECTION 4. RESULTS; RUNOFF. (a) The secretary of state shall announce the results of the election. If a nominee receives a majority of the votes cast, the secretary of state shall declare that nominee to be elected to the office of speaker of the house of representatives.

(b) If no nominee receives a majority of the votes cast, the two nominees receiving the largest number of votes in the initial vote shall be in a runoff conducted by voting machine as provided by Section 3 of this motion. The secretary of state shall announce the results of the runoff and declare the nominee receiving a majority of the votes cast to be elected.

SECTION 5. OATH. (a) After the election, the secretary of state shall:

(1) appoint a committee of members to escort the speaker-elect to the speaker's rostrum for the purpose of taking the constitutional oath of office by the speaker-elect; and

(2) direct the administration of the oath of office to the speaker-elect.

(b) The speaker shall take the chair immediately after taking the oath of office.

Hunter and Walle

The motion was read and prevailed.

ELECTION OF THE SPEAKER OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Secretary Nelson announced that the next order of business would be the election of the speaker of the House of Representatives of the Eighty-Eighth Legislature of the State of Texas and stated nominations for speaker would now be in order.

Pursuant to the provisions of the previous motion in writing, Secretary Nelson drew lots to determine the order in which members would proceed to make nominations and seconding speeches and to determine the color of light on the voting machine indicating a vote for each nominee. It was determined that the name of the Honorable Dade Phelan of Jefferson County, who would be represented by the green voting light, would be placed in nomination first, followed by the name of the Honorable Tony Tinderholt of Tarrant County, who would be represented by the white voting light.

Secretary Nelson recognized the Honorable Cody Harris of Anderson County, who placed in nomination for speaker of the House of Representatives of the Eighty-Eighth Legislature of the State of Texas the name of the Honorable Dade Phelan of Jefferson County, speaking as follows:

Madam Secretary, distinguished guests, members, and families, welcome to the Texas House. Members, it is my honor and privilege to stand before you in this historic chamber and place in nomination the name of the Honorable Dade Phelan, my colleague and dear friend, for speaker of the Texas House of Representatives.

Texans have bestowed on us, as members of this distinguished body, the tremendous responsibility of being their voice in state government for the next 140 days—and what a huge responsibility that is. One of the first and most important tasks we have before us is selecting a speaker to lead us. One who will do so with integrity, honesty, and a steady hand. These are all qualities we have seen demonstrated by Speaker Phelan, not only in the good times, but also in those that have been especially challenging.

Much has changed since we last gathered here two years ago. Our state's population has grown to over 30 million people with more moving here every day. But this blessing brings with it serious challenges, like updating and expanding our roadways, providing water security, and ensuring a fair and predictable regulatory climate that continues to attract new industry and jobs for our constituents. We are also faced with a bleeding and broken border, where we must find the balance between compassion and respecting the rule of law because Washington refuses to do so.

Over the last week we witnessed the culmination of decades of dysfunction in our nation's capital. Partisanship and petty political theater have come to personify our nation's political landscape and we know that there are powers on both sides of the political spectrum who want the same dysfunction for Texas.

The revered Sam Houston, whose portrait hangs over my left shoulder, once said, "Texas will again lift its head and stand among the nations." It is my firm belief that Texas, and particularly the Texas House, stands as an example to the world of how a representative government is supposed to work. The best way for us to prevent our chamber from going down the dark and broken path of Washington, D.C., is to elect a leader who recognizes that this house and its future are far better served when we elevate members based on their knowledge, experience, and skills rather than basing every single decision on the party abbreviation following someone's name. That leader is Dade Phelan.

Dade Phelan has shown that passing legislation that reflects the will of the majority and operating the chamber in a fair manner are not mutually exclusive. You can and should do both. Leadership is participative, not directive. It is a partnership, not a dictatorship. We need a leader who will encourage the members of this body to vote their districts, offer everyone an equal seat at the table, even as calls to silence those who disagree with us grow louder. One who respects the rules, history, and process that make this distinguished body work. Dade Phelan has effectively led this house through some of the most challenging times in our state's modern history. In his first term as speaker, Dade successfully guided the house through the many complex legislative challenges brought by COVID-19. Then in February of 2021, the trajectory of the session was completely disrupted when the State of Texas experienced one of the worst winter weather events in its history. He led us through multiple special sessions, and despite all that, under Speaker Phelan's leadership, we were able to emerge with a balanced budget, vital fixes to our state's power grid, stronger elections, better health care for mothers and babies, and the list goes on and on. That brings us to today. We start this session with $32.7 billion in revenue surplus, a diverse new class of members, a fresh set of ideas, challenges facing our constituents, and an opportunity to elect a leader who will ensure that we are given the tools to perpetuate the Texas miracle. Members, Dade is many things: a successful businessman, a loving husband and father, a dedicated state representative, and friend to us all. He has proven his leadership in good times and bad. He places a premium on fairness and respect for the process and I am certain that he is the right man for the job. Madam Secretary and members, it is my great honor and privilege to nominate the Honorable Dade Phelan to continue serving this great and distinguished institution as speaker of the Texas House of Representatives. Thank you.

Secretary Nelson recognized the Honorable Bryan Slaton of Hunt County, who placed in nomination for speaker of the House of Representatives of the Eighty-Eighth Legislature of the State of Texas the name of the Honorable Tony Tinderholt of Tarrant County, speaking as follows:

I am honored to be up here nominating my friend, Representative Tony Tinderholt, to be our next speaker of the Texas House.

Last week, America witnessed the four most transparent days in the halls of Congress in modern history, where we saw actual debate and discussion. That only happened because conservatives were unwilling to rubber stamp an establishment leader with a history of working with democrats to stop conservative policy. Another thing you might have noticed was that the democrats in Congress stood together, consistently in opposition to Speaker McCarthy. Not one democrat broke rank to vote for a republican.

In Texas, we do things a little differently. Our speaker courted democrats to get his position, gave them chairmanships, and protected them from punishment when they fled to D.C. And today, every single one of them will be voting for his leadership in this chamber. Some will claim this is good bipartisanship, but it's actually just a powerful consolation prize for losing elections. We have passed some good republican bills over the last several years. When we pass conservative legislation, I am told things like, "We need to take a little break if this house is going to stay together".

To my democrat colleagues, you're brilliant. You've created an environment where republicans believe we can only get a few wins each session. We then spend most of our time reflecting on the joy of our few wins instead of the cost of our failures. Did we end most abortions in Texas? Yes. Did we finally pass partial constitutional carry? Yes. But there are other things we must consider: Can children be forced by their parents to go through barbaric gender reassignment surgeries and procedures? Yes. Did many of our constituents' property tax bills go up? Absolutely. Are young children being sexualized in public schools or at drag shows? Yes. Are millions of illegals flooding across our state's open border? Yes.

At some point we need to realize we are settling for just enough wins to get re-elected. We cannot afford to operate that way any more. It is time for republicans to take the lead, to actually implement the conservative policies that the people are demanding. We have a lot to do, and the eight GOP legislative priorities are only the bare minimum that we have to accomplish this session.

If you know Representative Tinderholt, you know he's honest, he will always shoot you straight, and he will actually allow a debate on all the policies that were on your push cards during campaign season. The answer is clear, and I'm grateful Representative Tinderholt has given us a chance to change the way this chamber operates.

Every one of you worked very hard to get here, with the support of the people of your district. And to the new members: The moment you start letting other representatives here make you vote the way that they want, you've handed away power that the people in your district gave you and you alone. Thank you and God bless.

Secretary Nelson stated that nominations were closed and recognized the Honorable Angie Chen Button, who seconded the nomination of the Honorable Dade Phelan, speaking as follows:

Thank you, Madam Secretary, and congratulations. My dear colleagues, most of us arrived here today knowing how to juggle. We try to balance our personal lives and careers with the added responsibility of serving the diverse needs of our constituents. While some of the big headline grabbing issues dominate conversations, there are hundreds of less flashy issues impacting our constituents' daily lives. Juggling a lot of balls gets challenging when people keep tossing you more balls. Well, sometimes it can feel like this is a game of dodgeball. Well, a few sessions ago Dade Phelan chaired the State Affairs Committee. While on the house floor I saw him walking this way. He came to talk to me about his bill, and he heard that a city in my district did not like it. Guess what? He said, "Angie, I completely understand if you are not able to support my bill." Wow, the powerful chairman said that to me. No pushy sales pitch just assuring me to use my best judgment to serve my district with all my heart. Since then, Chairman Phelan has become Speaker Phelan and he has presided over this body with the same respect for the office we all hold. A leader is someone who does the right thing, not because somebody is watching him or paying attention, but because this is the right thing to do. Leaders bring people together and look for solutions. They provide guidance and inspiration to those around them. Leaders empower others. Great leaders are respected because they respect others. How about that? Dade Phelan is that leader. I am so proud to second the nomination of Dade Phelan as our house speaker. God bless Texas; God bless this house.

The nomination of the Honorable Tony Tinderholt was seconded by the Honorable Nate Schatzline of Tarrant County, speaking as follows:

I am proud to nominate and second the nomination of Representative Tinderholt for speaker. I would like to point out that I am also proud of Speaker Phelan for the stances he has taken that line up with my values as well. Whether that be the pro-life stance that he has taken or the pro-second amendment stance he's taken. I want to be very clear this vote from me is in support of my friend, someone who has supported me since the very beginning of my race. Representative Tony Tinderholt, a conservative fighter who has taken conservative stances time and time again and I trust his leadership. I look at Representative Tinderholt, I look at someone who votes his conscience. I look at someone who votes biblical, Christian values. I look at someone who takes the hard stances when others aren't willing to, and I look at someone who I can trust to do the right thing at all times.

I appreciate Speaker Phelan and I appreciate all that he has done for this state. But when I nominate Representative Tony Tinderholt, I do so as a friend who I know is going to stand in the gap and take the stances that our GOP has asked us to do, that our counties have asked us to do, and that our districts have asked us to do. My district specifically, has asked me to take a stand on the GOP priorities, and I know Representative Tinderholt will do just that. I believe that chairmanships should go with the majority party. I believe that we must take strong stances so that we can get strong conservative legislation done, and I trust that Representative Tinderholt will do just that. So I am proud to second the nomination of Representative Tony Tinderholt.

The nomination of the Honorable Dade Phelan was also seconded by the Honorable Tracy King of Uvalde County, speaking as follows:

Good afternoon, Madam Secretary, members of the house, family, and guests. It is indeed an honor and a privilege to be with you here today. I've got to tell you that I've heard a lot of seconding speeches in my career and I always wonder, "Where do they find these people?" And then today I'm standing in front of you and I'm still wondering, "Where did they find these people?" I've served with five speakers—and Dade Phelan gets it. He understands what the job description is. He's been a gubernatorial appointee, a staffer, a member, and a speaker.

Ladies and gentlemen, he didn't do that by himself. His wife, Kim Phelan, is a devoted mother of four boys, a great wife, and an absolutely incredible attorney, if y'all didn't know that. Thank you so much, Kim.

I got to know Speaker Phelan when he served as the vice-chairman of the house Natural Resources Committee and I could tell then that he had a good work ethic and he was truly dedicated to the people in the great state of Texas. But what most impressed me about Dade Phelan was a trip that he made to Uvalde, Texas last week to meet with the families of the 19 children and the two teachers that were killed in the Robb school shooting on May the 24th. He represents the district in East Texas that borders the Louisiana border. Uvalde is part of a district two-thirds of the way across the state that borders the country of Mexico. Very, very different places. He didn't have to do that. He didn't have to make that trip. It won't affect his reelection in East Texas. Or his reelection for Texas Speaker of the House—I was going to vote for him anyway. He made the trip across the state because he cared, and he wanted those families to know that he cared about what they were going through. It was not an easy meeting, I was there the whole time. They agreed on some things and they disagreed on some other things. But throughout the entire meeting he was honest with them, he was up-front, answered those questions boldly, and it was impressive. Ladies and gentlemen, those are qualities that I find very, very admirable, particularly under those difficult situations. Now, we all come from different backgrounds and there's 150 of us that serve in this house together and Speaker Phelan believes in giving every member the opportunity to represent the folks that sent them here to do that. So Madam Secretary, for these and many other reasons, it is an honor and a privilege to second the nomination of Dade Phelan to be speaker of the house. Thank you and God bless you.

The nomination of the Honorable Dade Phelan was also seconded by the Honorable John Lujan of Bexar County, speaking as follows:

First of all, I want to thank all the members and families for being here and welcome them to our Texas Capitol. Right? I'm just proud to be here for that. I just want to let you know that I would not be here today serving my community were it not for the vision and encouragement of Speaker Phelan. He's a man of strong faith, values, and convictions. He's never afraid of hard work, and above all he puts Texas first in everything he does.

As members of the Texas House, we're on a big journey together. We will never be in this exact same body of 150 members, facing the same exact set of circumstances, debating the same exact issues, ever again. We're in a unique time and a unique moment in Texas history. Speaker Phelan, like the rest of us, shares the common goal of wanting to make our state better. And we can only get better, when we're debating and discussing some of the most pressing issues that are before us, by giving every member who wants to have a say in the process the opportunity and the encouragement to do so. I'll never forget the first time I met

Speaker Phelan. He called me when I was struggling to make a critical decision about serving in the legislature. My phone rang, and it was the speaker. And I said, "Hey, what's up, Speaker?" I was playing around because I didn't know who the speaker was. I'm a retired San Antonio firefighter, and that's what we do, we play with each other a lot. So I thought someone was joking with me. But after a few minutes, when I realized it was actually him, I was so encouraged that a person like this was helping to lead our state. When I got off the phone, I knew I wanted to be a part of that vision of service that Speaker Phelan had articulated toward me.

It's for these reasons and many more that I support Speaker Phelan as our speaker for the 88th Texas Legislature, and I hope that you will join me in doing so. Thank you, and God bless the great State of Texas.

The nomination of the Honorable Dade Phelan was also seconded by the Honorable Toni Rose of Dallas County, speaking as follows:

I am so honored today to second the nomination of the Honorable Dade Phelan for speaker of the Texas House of Representatives. Like me, Dade believes that as members we can agree to disagree, and there is a path for each of us to vote our principles, do what is best for our districts, and still find time to respectfully listen to one another.

One of the greatest examples of our ability to cross partisan lines for the greater good was seen last session, when this chamber overwhelmingly voted to support my legislation, HB 133, to extend postpartum medicaid coverage for new mothers from 60 days to 12 months after having a baby. To our new members, you will learn this the hard way real soon, but there's this pesky chamber on the other side that we are forced to do business with. Unfortunately, despite a large bipartisan coalition of house members voting in favor of that bill, the senate version lowered the threshold of coverage to six months rather than 12, thus casting into jeopardy the conditions of postpartum health coverage for Texans all together. The federal government only eased application requirements to states that expanded to a full year of coverage. Like policy-making, our health care system is arduous and complicated, so I'll spare you the nuts and bolts. The short version is because we ended up passing the senate version, this bill has not been implemented the way the house intended it to be. Our waiver to obtain federal funds now hangs in balance, and when the public health emergency ends soon Texas moms will once again be removed from health coverage when their baby is a mere two months old. We recognize that the fight for 12 months is not yet over, and that is due in no small part of the leadership of Dade Phelan, who has made 12 month extensions and the need to better support Texas' new moms and children the priority of the 88th Legislative Session.

Last session, he was right by my side every step of the way, advocating for my bill and helping it get over the finish line by making it the central focus of his Healthy Families, Healthy Texas legislative package. In the year and a half since then, Dade has not been quiet. He went on to lead our chamber into urging our centers for Medicare and Medicaid services to approve our application and to get it done without delay. In every speech, every interview, and conversation I have had with him he has reaffirmed to me his support for this legislation, and assured me we would get it done once again. He was supporting our effort long before Dobbs. So when he says it will get done once again, and made top priority this time around, I believe him.

Members, I share this story with you today because it's an example of the type of leader we need for this chamber. One who takes up our fights as his own, one who believes that good policy is just that—good policy, and one who is willing to continue the work until the work is done, the right way and not the easy way. Dade has filled his entire legislative career with the intention that this building works for everyone. As a staffer, then a representative, and eventually speaker, he recognizes that even though the needs of our districts and constituents may be different, they are still worthy of being heard. So no matter who you are, or where you come from, or the reasons you have for being here, Dade believes the members of this house deserve a fair chance to succeed. That is the type of leadership this chamber needs and that is why I am proud to support my friend and second the nomination of Dade Phelan as speaker of the Texas House.

Secretary Nelson recognized the Honorable Tony Tinderholt who addressed the house, in lieu of any additional seconding speeches, speaking as follows:

Members and fellow Texans watching at home and in the gallery, last session I voted for the speaker in hopes that he would change the broken system that led to conservative bills dying each session. I even hoped that during the interim things might get better. Instead, the tone and message to Texans got worse not better. I watched as our speaker refused to address republican delegates at the largest republican gathering in the nation, the Texas GOP convention. Many of you who told me you spent months trying to get a meeting with him to discuss various policies only to be ignored. Many of you who I talked to.

The speaker of the Texas House is supposed to be a servant-leader, one available to every single member of the body, not only accessible to a select few who exhibit the obedient behavior that leadership wants and needs. Every one of you knows that I consider you a friend. I don't like when we disagree and I try to be respectful. I treat everyone the same. Ask yourself, what do Texans need and deserve? I've realized that they need for me to fight to fix this broken system, to give these central policies a chance to pass. What we have been doing has not been working. The change needed is uncomfortable, but the cost of doing it right pales in comparison to the cost of this house repeating lost opportunities session after session. Our own congressman, Chip Roy, recently said, before he accomplished the changes to the rules at the U.S. Capitol, "The status quo remains because people want their power. They want their committee chairmanships, they want their gavel, they want the ability to control the power and the purse strings. But they don't want to look in the mirror to fundamentally change a broken town, a broken house, a broken body, and broken federal government." I look forward to working with each of you this session to advance a conservative agenda. I'm committed to this regardless of how today's vote goes. Many of you have told me you are worried what will happen if you vote for me. That kind of environment should not exist in this chamber.

In closing, I am committed to ensuring that every single republican legislative priority is debated on the house floor. Each of you should vote your district, but while passing the 1,000 bills that all of you have made a priority—and I agree, your bills are a priority—we can take a couple of days to debate the eight bills that the Republican Party of Texas has asked us to pass. I know there are chairmen in this chamber that I am convinced are conservative. There are members who will vote for Dade today who I believe want to pass conservative bills this session. And if last session, or during our special sessions, or during the interim, our current speaker was ready to lead on a bold conservative agenda, including the Republican priorities, then I would not be running today. I ask that you chair us this session so that we make Texas an even better place. I appreciate every single one of you and I actually appreciate Dade Phelan and his family for his service.

The nomination of the Honorable Dade Phelan was also seconded by the Honorable Shelby Slawson of Erath County, speaking as follows:

Members, as we assemble here today yoked with the great responsibility to lead Texas, I rise to second the nomination of Dade Phelan as our next speaker. Two years ago, we elected Dade to lead this chamber, to be the arbiter of our self-imposed rules, and an even, fair hand on the gavel. And that he has been. Before that vote, I was just a know nothing freshman. So not knowing what to expect here, I asked Dade about various priorities and how the house and the speakership works. And he explained, as you've probably heard, the speaker's role is calling balls and strikes as the members create the plays and fight for our bills in here. Dade Phelan, gavel in hand, was a man true to his word. It is a messy job, the business of liberty. Thomas Jefferson once said, "Timid men prefer the calm of despotism to the tempestuous sea of liberty." Well, this Texas House is no respite for timid souls. Other chambers, maybe. D.C., maybe. But on any given day in here we tilt full tempest. Our colleague, Dade Phelan, is no timid man. From external forces of a pandemic to catastrophic weather, Dade rose to every challenge. Every member had the ability to show up in this building and fight for the ideas laid before this body. Under Dade's leadership, with him standing right here behind us, this house passed historic, long-sought and hard fought conservative legislation. Under Speaker Phelan, this house fearlessly led for our children, our Texas, and for our nation, and will do so again. Which is why I am proud to fully stand behind him as our next speaker. Thank you, God bless you, God bless Texas.

Pursuant to the provisions of the previous motion in writing, the members of the house proceeded to the casting of the votes (Record 1) for the speaker of the House of Representatives of the Eighty-Eighth Legislature of the State of Texas.

STATEMENT OF VOTE

When Record No. 1 was taken for election of the speaker, my vote failed to register. I intended to vote for the Honorable Dade Phelan.

Hayes

Secretary Nelson declared the Honorable Dade Phelan of Jefferson County to be the duly elected speaker of the House of Representatives of the Eighty-Eighth Legislature of the State of Texas.

COMMITTEE APPOINTED

The chair announced the appointment of the following escort committee for Speaker-elect Dade Phelan: Smith, chair; Campos, Gates, Gervin-Hawkins, Hefner, Hernandez, Jetton, Leach, Manuel, Meyer, Oliverson, and Patterson.

OATH OF OFFICE TAKEN BY THE SPEAKER OF THE HOUSE

Speaker-elect Phelan was recognized at the speaker's rostrum.

The Honorable Dade Phelan of Jefferson County took the constitutional oath of office as speaker of the House of Representatives of the Eighty-Eighth Legislature of the State of Texas, which was administered by the Honorable Jeff Branick, county judge of Jefferson County, as follows:

"I, Dade Phelan, do solemnly swear, that I will faithfully execute the duties of the office of speaker of the House of Representatives of the Eighty-Eighth Legislature of the State of Texas, and will to the best of my ability preserve, protect, and defend the Constitution and laws of the United States and of this state. So help me God."

Secretary Nelson recognized the Honorable Morgan Meyer of Dallas County who introduced family members of Speaker Phelan: his wife, Kim; his sons, Ford, Mack, Hank, and Luke; his parents, Janey and Michael; and his siblings.

ADDRESS BY THE SPEAKER

Secretary Nelson introduced the Honorable Dade Phelan, speaker of the House of Representatives, who addressed the house, speaking as follows:

Good afternoon and welcome to the first day of the 88th Texas Legislature. Madam Secretary, the Honorable Jane Nelson, welcome back to the house. The west wing looks good on you, but it seems like senators will do anything to get on the house floor these days. Thank you for being here to oversee today's proceedings as the first Texan in history to preside over an opening day ceremony in both the house and the senate. Congratulations, Madam Secretary. And to Cody, Angie, Tracy, Shelby, John, and Toni, thank you. I hope to live up to your support, and I cannot do this job without friends like you at my side.

After completing a regular session that was anything but regular, three special sessions, and traveling 30,000 miles this interim, I would like to start this address the way I like to start every day, which is thanking my wife Kim for still being my wife. In addition to being an amazing wife, she's a loving mother to our four boys, an accomplished attorney, an advocate for juvenile justice reform, a leader on mental health awareness and education, and I could go on for days. But what I cannot do is this job without your constant support. Thank you. I'd also like to thank my four sons: Ford, Mack, Hank, and Luke. Thank you, boys. I want to thank you for teaching me how to referee a conversation between people who care a lot about an issue. We don't have points of order back home, but a good knock down, drag out fight over the Xbox is pretty good training for being a speaker. And Luke and Hank had one two hours ago. Thank you for being the best kids a dad could ask for. And just like your mom, I cannot do this without your blessings, so thank you. My parents Mike and Janey, my six brothers and sisters, thank you for your love and support over the years. Growing up, if I had a giant gavel like I do now, I would be an only child today. They're also the ones with the real big foreheads, too. I get criticized for my forehead but I inherited it from my family.

As I look out upon this distinguished gathering, I see 149 people. Ordinary Texans who are eager to get to work on extraordinary things. I am grateful for the majority of you who have honored me with your vote, but I am proud to represent all of you as speaker of the 88th Legislature. I also see your beautiful families, friends, and supporters. Let us not forget the sacrifices they have made to get you where you are today. Texas appreciates you. Members, let's give them a round of applause.

For the newcomers here, our freshman class of 2023, congratulations. Words of caution, please do not confuse this body with the one in Washington, D.C. After watching Congress attempt to function last week, I cannot imagine why some want Texas to be like D.C. New members, you now are in the Texas House of Representatives, part of a historic assembly. One hundred years after the first woman was elected to the Texas House, our membership now includes 45 women—the highest number ever. And all of us represent 150 unique populations, from the cities, the suburbs, and the countryside. One hundred and ninety-four thousand strong in each district. And while our districts are certainly unique, they have one thing in common, they have trusted us to be their voice. And that is what we will do for the next 140 days. One day at a time, one issue at a time, one bill at a time. All of that work will be rooted in one of the most fundamental and necessary elements of this institution, the Texas House rules. As the most deliberative body in this nation, our rules matter. My advice to new members is to know them, love them, and be certain we will enforce them. Because our rules keep the game fair, but they do not dictate the outcome. We will have divisions, every session does. But that division does not have to define us. Let the political fires that have raged compel us to come to the table for a solution, not flee from our responsibilities. There will be countless outside voices—not from your district, not from this state—that seek to control our conversation, and they will be plenty loud. But the conversations that matter to us, the conversations that matter to our constituents, happen in here, in this room; in the Texas House. We do our work together here, and when we do that, we might just be surprised to find out how much we have in common.

We can find our first patch of common ground in the most fundamental element of society, the family. If we are going to be a family-focused house, and I do hope we will be, we must take a long look at what matters to Texas families. Fortunately, everyone here has spent the better part of a year on the campaign trail, hearing directly from our constituents. And, like you, I've heard some very straightforward concerns from the families in my district. I've heard about the economy, inflation, difficulty in making ends meet, ever increasing property taxes that have led many to feel—year-in and year-out—they are renting their property from the government. Like them, I believe tax relief should be a priority. But time and time again, we have seen the legislature provide some form of property tax relief, but to make it lasting we must do something about runaway appraisals because taxpayers deserve better. My constituents also talked about the need for quality health care at a reasonable price for families and businesses. They appreciate the progress we made last session tackling the cost of prescription drugs and health plans, pricing transparency, improving outcomes for women and children, but they need us to do much more. So we're going to continue the momentum by giving patients greater control over their health care, as well as better access. In my travels, I also heard about Texans' desire for safe streets. During the 87th, we reset the national conversation on criminal justice. We showed it's possible to improve public safety while defending the rights of the accused, and offering second chances when deserved. We led the nation in decreasing our incarceration rates, reducing recidivism, and facilitating reentry. We have proven that you can be tough on violent criminals while also making the criminal justice system work better for non-violent offenders, and that is what we will continue to do. But members, we can work all day on these issues, but if rogue district attorneys will not uphold the law, what progress are we really making? It is time to reign them in.

Our constituents also want roads that can move them in a timely manner from their home to their job to their child's school to their place of worship. Texans want a reliable supply of water, resiliency from flooding, dependable energy, and high-speed internet across this great state. They want exceptional schools with exceptional teachers. With a once in a lifetime budget surplus, now is the time to put a down payment on the future of Texas. To make this down payment even more critical, over a thousand people move to Texas every single day. They do not bring these investments with them, members. We all serve different regions, but we all recognize these as common obligations. But members, perhaps we have no greater task ahead of us than protecting those who will carry on what we have started—the children of Texas. I created the Select Committee on Youth Health and Safety last session to examine the issues facing our children. The threats to their safety are all too real—child trafficking, violence in schools, bad actors seeking to exploit their innocence, and social media companies that prey on the insecurities of children leaving them vulnerable to exploitation, sexualization, and indoctrination. Members, we must stand up for the children of Texas. Teachers and parents alike want safer schools, and our kids deserve them. Last May, the lives of 21 Texans—teachers and children—were stolen when a gunman opened fire at Robb Elementary in Uvalde, Texas. We owe it to the memory of those children and teachers to make sensible, meaningful change. I want to thank the families of Uvalde for inviting me to meet with them just last week. Having heard from them directly, and taking into account the findings of our investigative committee, we have insights to inform our decision.

This is going to be an especially tough conversation, but this body has proven capable of handling conversations like this in the past. I am confident we will do so again.

As we work to make Texas a better place to raise a family, we must also acknowledge there is true suffering in society, and we have to make those things better for those families in the toughest situations. The most important thing to do certainly is to ensure our economy continues to generate quality jobs and meaningful wages. After all, an opportunity to provide for one's family is a powerful motivator no matter where one is in life. At the same time, let us not forget people who need more than a job. Even with a vibrant economy, a single parent who can work to afford child care, health care, transportation, and housing is indeed rare. How can we improve their lives and their children's futures? Tax-free diapers, wipes, and other child care supplies is a great start, and so is ensuring health coverage for new moms that lasts not sixty days, not six months, but an entire year.

Starting today I represent Jasper County. Last week, I read a story about the local county hospital joining the 60 percent of rural Texas hospitals that no longer deliver babies. Mothers in rural areas now face hour long drives for basic services. We should not leave this session without a firm commitment to reversing this trend, because in my dictionary, the definition of pro-life includes ensuring access to affordable health care for all, especially Texas mothers and their babies. And to show the Texas House is committed to the maternal health of our own staff this session, I am proud to announce we are offering additional resources to guarantee 12 full weeks of maternal and paternal leave for those working for this chamber this session.

Members, our names may be on the door, but the men and women who serve in our Capitol and our district offices are the ones who do the heavy lifting. We must provide an environment that respects them and recognizes their value. With rapid inflation, let's also retain them by finally increasing their salaries. Show Mr. Schaefer voting aye. Making things better for all Texas families is how we deliver on the limitless potential for our state, in every area. From gainful employment to public safety, that includes border security, which is certainly on the minds of our members, but especially those who represent border communities. We can all agree our border towns have been bearing the brunt of Washington's failed immigration policies, some going as far as declaring themselves to be in a state of disaster. It is a legal and humanitarian crisis. Every budget I've voted for has poured millions, now billions of dollars into the gap between federal policies and realities on the ground. As stewards of every budget dollar we must ensure our strategy not only fits realities on the ground but is truly measurably effective. We must also acknowledge additional threats posed by a porous border: more than 1,600 Texans died from fentanyl overdoses in 2021. That is 1,600 too many. Before Texas families get that heartbreaking call, members we must stop the cartels in their tracks, and we will.

Members, though we face many challenges this session, there will be even more opportunities. The work is hard, but it is worthwhile. The work is demanding, but it is noble. The work is necessary, and because we have the privilege of doing it for the people of Texas, I know we will get it done together. It is a privilege to serve as a member of this distinguished body, and I am once again humbled by the opportunity to be your speaker. Thank you for this enormous honor, thank you for serving this great state. God bless you all, and God bless Texas.
