Anishinaabemowin Ojibwe Language. "This web site is dedicated to the Anishinaabe (Ojibwe) language. Most materials available are of the Southwestern Ojibwe dialect. But there are also some materials from Odawa and Northwestern (Manitoba) Ojibwe. As well as some old books written when dialects looked different, and differences were few."

Online Anishinaabemowin. by Isadore Toulouse. Teaches weekly language lesson on Tuesday evenings, for one hour, 7 - 8 pm, via online meeting program moderated by Brita Brookes and Joni Shawana. Go to the website below, then click on the door that says "Biindigen" (come in). Or you can access the same by way of their facebook page below, and click on the link from there. Once the screen comes up, you're prompted to enter your username (you can put anything there, just your first name, or a nickname...). No password is required. You only need speakers, so you can hear the teacher, while he teaches about the page(s) he is showing on the screen. There is space to ask and/or answer questions in writing, and see others comments, in the chat box.
