Terry,

His tone with me wasn't too far from that. It was that they are agnostic in that regard and will do what the court wants them to do. They are always supportive of parties working out their differences, but that they weren't really a part of that. If the differences between y'all and the Foundation are worked out, they're happy to go away and let everyone go their separate ways.

A such, I don't feel like we need to have them there to resolve things and streamlining the issues will probably be best for trying to reach a resolution. Thanks.

Josh

Subject: Lemmon/Receiver

I wanted to bring to your attention that in my discussion with Lemmon yesterday, he questioned the need for the Receiver and counsel to attend any mediation. I was surprised by that as I had just assumed that they would be attending. It seems to me they would want to attend, but apparently not.

Josh, did this subject come up when you were talking to Lemmon? Just wondering how he handled that with you, if at all?
