Following up on our discussion last week, attached is a spreadsheet that Peter Lamore prepared based on the account statements Madoff provided to Fairfield Sentry Limited (FSL). The spreadsheet indicates the dates when Madoff purchased and sold equities and options for the split strike conversion strategy as well as movements in S&P100 on those days. Also attached are FSL's monthly strategy reviews, which contain narratives describing the trading for each month. If you have any questions about the spreadsheet, please contact Peter at extension Personal Privacy

Thank you and best regards,

Simona

Fairfield Sentry Limited — January, 2004

Fairfield Sentry Limited ("Sentry," the "Fund") (Class A) returned 0.94% net in January 2004, capturing over half of the 1.85% move up in the S&P 100 Index<sup>1</sup> for the month. The Fund returned slightly more than twice the long bond yield of 0.41%.<sup>2</sup>

The strategy was implemented in three increments in the first two weeks of the year by purchasing a basket of 45 S&P 100 equities and accompanying options collars. Just prior to options expiration in January, the option positions were unwound by buying back the previously sold S&P 100 Index call options. The put options expired worthless, as they remained out-of-the-money due to the rise in the Index. The options hedge was then rolled to higher strikes and out to February expiration. The stock portfolio remained intact for the rest of the month except for the sale of its holdings of Texas Instruments.

Hedging costs continued to be relatively affordable in the current low volatility environment, and represented about 3% of net profits generated during the month.

Following the Fund's positive net performance in January, the strategy continued to be invested at month end.

This document does not constitute an offer to sell, or the solicitation of an offer to buy, interests in the Fund. Such an offer or solicitation may only be made by delivery of the Fund's confidential offering memorandum, a copy of which is available from the Investment. An investment in the Fund is highly speculative and entails substantial risk of loss. There can be no assurance that the Fund's investment objectives will be achieved. Past performance is no guarantee of future results.

Net dividends reinvested.

The U.S. Treasury Bond 5 3/8 expiring February 15, 2031 had an average annualized yield of 4.962% in January 2004, or 0.41% for the month.

Fairfield Sentry Limited — February, 2004

Fairfield Sentry Limited ("Sentry," the "Fund") (Class A) returned 0.50% net in February 2004, capturing more than half of the 0.93% increase in the S&P 100 Index<sup>1</sup> for the month. The performance of the Fund in February was in line with the long bond yield of 0.40%.<sup>2</sup> Year-to-date, the Fund has returned 1.45%.

The split-strike conversion strategy began the month with a fully invested position in a basket of 44 S&P 100 equities and accompanying options collar that was purchased in the previous month. The strategy was unwound in four unequal increments the week of options expiration and the proceeds were invested in short dated U.S. Treasury Bills. The Fund maintained this cash position through to the end of the month.

Gross gains in the value of the stock basket and dividends received were only partially offset by declines in the value of the options positions, resulting in the positive performance this month.

MONTHLY STRATEGY REVIEW

Fairfield Sentry Limited

Manager: Fairfield Greenwich (Bermuda) Ltd. April 2004

Fairfield Sentry Limited ("Sentry," the "Fund") (Class A) returned 0.43% net in April 2004 during a month when the S&P100 Index posted a loss of -1.74%. Year-to-date, the Fund has returned 1.94% net while the S&P100 Index lost -1.80%.

The strategy was fully implemented in April by purchasing a basket of stocks drawn from the S&P 100 and accompanying options collars. Prior to the expiration of the options in April, the positions were rolled into a new collar using May options. The stock basket remained intact throughout the month with no additional stock trades occurring after the initial implementation.

With the decline in the S&P100 Index this month, the stock basket also posted a loss of -2.66% in gross terms. This was more than offset by the increase in the value of put options and the premium collected from the sale of the call options during April, resulting in the net increase of 0.43% for the month.

Performance shown is net of all fees. S&P 100 Index performance is calculated with net dividends reinvested. #### Fairfield Sentry Limited

Manager: Fairfield Greenwich (Bermuda) Ltd. May 2004

Fairfield Sentry Limited ("Sentry," the "Fund") (Class A) returned 0.66% net in May 2004 during a month when the S&P100 Index gained 0.95%. Year-to-date, the Fund has gained 2.62% net while the S&P100 Index returned -0.31%.

The Fund began the month with a fully invested position in a typical basket of S&P 100 stocks and accompanying options collars. The stock basket and options positions were reversed during the month and the proceeds were invested in short-dated U.S. Treasury Bills. This stance was maintained for the balance of the May.

The positive performance this month was driven primarily by gross gains in the value of the options positions. These gains more than offset the decline in the value of the stock basket.

Performance shown is net of all fees. S&P 100 Index performance is calculated with net dividends reinvested. This document does not constitute an offer to sell, or the solicitation of an offer to buy, interests in the Fund. Manager: Fairfield Greenwich (Bermuda) Ltd. June 2004

Fairfield Sentry Limited Class A ("Sentry" or the "Fund") returned 1.28% net in June 2004 during a month when the S&P100 Index gained 1.78%. Year-to-date, the Fund has gained 3.93% net while the S&P100 Index returned 1.46%.

In June, the Fund initiated its third implementation cycle of 2004, entering into a fully invested position in a typical basket of S&P 100 stocks and accompanying options collars. Later in the month, the stock basket and options positions were reversed and the proceeds were invested in short-dated U.S. Treasury Bills. The Fund maintained this investment for the balance of the month.

The positive performance in June was driven primarily by gains in the value of the stock positions which contributed over 87% of the gross gains earned during the month. The options positions also contributed to gross profits, with gains earned in the S&P 100 Index call options more than compensating losses in the S&P 100 Index put options. Interest and dividend income also made minor contributions to net profit this month.

Fairfield Sentry Limited ("Sentry," the "Fund") (Class A) returned 1.33% net in August 2004 during a month when the S&P100 Index gained 0.39%. Year-to-date, the Fund has gained 5.40% net while the S&P100 Index returned -1.00%.

During the month, the Fund initiated its fourth implementation of its strategy this year by purchasing a typical basket of S&P 100 stocks and accompanying options collars. The stock basket remained largely unchanged for the balance of the month while the options collar was rolled to September expiration. The Fund continued to be fully invested at month-end.

The performance of large-cap U.S. equities in August was characterized by an initial decline during the first two weeks, after which they retraced their paths to their July closing values by month's end. The Fund's positive performance in August was driven primarily by gross gains in the value of the stock basket. The options transactions, on the other hand, detracted from net income and this was mostly attributable to the cost of the uncompensated put hedge. Interest and dividend income also made a minor contribution to net profit.

Manager: Fairfield Greenwich (Bermuda) Ltd. September 2004

Fairfield Sentry Limited ("Sentry," the "Fund") (Class A) returned 0.53% net in September 2004 while the S&P100 Index returned -0.55%. Year-to-date, the Fund has gained 5.96% net and the S&P100 Index has returned -1.55%.

The Fund was fully invested in the split-strike conversion strategy at the end of August and held this position until the week of options expiration in September. The stock basket and accompanying options collar were unwound during that week and the proceeds invested in short dated U.S. Treasury Bills. The Fund maintained this cash position through to the end of the month.

Gross gains in the value of the stock basket and dividends received were only partially offset by declines in the value of the options positions, resulting in the positive performance this month.

Fairfield Sentry Limited ("Sentry," the "Fund") returned 0.24% net in December 2004 during a month when the S&P100 Index gained 3.39%. The 2004 annual return of the Fund was 7.08% net (former Class A shares) or 6.44% net (former Class B shares), while the S&P100 Index return was 6.43% for the year.

The Fund initiated its sixth and final implementation of the split-strike conversion strategy this year by investing about 25% of Fund assets in a basket of S&P100 stocks and accompanying options collars. These positions were unwound during the month and the proceeds were invested in short-dated U.S. Treasuries. As in previous years, the Fund ended December with an all cash position of U.S. Treasuries.

The performance of the S&P100 Index in December was characterized by an initial decline followed by a gradual increase for the remainder of the month. The majority of the Fund's positive performance this month was driven by gross gains in the value of the stock basket. Fairfield Sentry Limited ("Sentry," or the "Fund") gained 0.63% net in May 2005 during a month when the S&P100 Index gained 2.34%. Year-to-date, the Fund has gained 2.52% net while the S&P100 Index has returned -1.03%.

During the month, the Fund initiated its second implementation of the split-strike conversion strategy (the "Strategy") of the year. About three-quarters of the Fund's assets were invested in a basket of stocks drawn from the S&P100 Index and accompanying options collars. The options collars consist of long S&P100 Index put options that are purchased in sufficient quantity to provide an approximate notional hedge to the stock basket, and short S&P 100 Index call options that are sold in sufficient quantity to largely finance the put hedge. Prior to the options expiration day, the Fund rolled the options collar up in strikes and out to the new spot month. This portfolio was maintained for the remainder of the month.

The Fund's positive performance this month was driven primarily by gross gains in the value of the stock basket. The options transactions, on the other hand, detracted from net income as would be expected in a rising market. Interest and dividend income also made contributions to net profit.

Certain statements in this document may include forward looking statements and forecasts concerning the Fund and the Fund's plans, intentions, strategies, expectations, predictions and financial forecasts concerning the Fund's future investment activities and results of operations and other future events or conditions based upon the views and opinions of the Fund's investment manager. Such forward-looking statements involve known and unknown risks, uncertainties and other factors, which may cause the actual results, performance or achievements of the funds to be materially different from any future results, performance or achievements expressed or implied by such forward looking statements. The Fairfield Greenwich Group assumes no obligation to update these forward-looking statements to reflect actual results, changes in assumption or changes in other factors affecting such forward-looking statements.

The index information is included merely to show the general trend in applicable markets in the periods indicated and is not intended to imply that the Fund was similar to the index either in composition or element of risk. Index information should not be interpreted as a benchmark for the fund. It is not possible to invest directly in an index.
