 Aaron Judge Scheduled For CT Scan

Share:

6 days ago New York Yankees outfielder Aaron Judge (ribs) is set to undergo another CT scan in a couple of weeks after the results of his March 13 CT scan showed that he was not yet fully healthy. Manager Aaron Boone is optimistic that the additional rest has allowed Judge's ribs to heal, but fantasy owners should remain cautious. Until Judge can swing pain-free consistently and his CT scan comes back clean, there is still a threat that the outfielder will undergo surgery and miss significant time. Fantasy owners should continue to monitor Judge's progress and avoid drafting him in the early rounds before the results of his scheduled CT scan are released. --Sam Chinitz - RotoBaller

 Raiders Not Interested In Jadeveon Clowney

Share:

4 days ago The Las Vegas Raiders are not interested in signing free-agent defensive end Jadeveon Clowney, according to sources. Clowney doesn't have many options at this point and has had to drop his asking price of around $21 million per season on the open market. COVID-19 restrictions have hurt Clowney, as teams haven't been able to take a look at the injury-prone pass-rusher with their own doctors. While Clowney has never had double-digit sacks in his career, he remains a disruptive force in opponent's backfields when he's healthy and on the field. This could drag out into the summer with Clowney ultimately likely to wind up taking a short-term deal for far less than what he was originally seeking. --Keith Hernandez - RotoBaller Source: ESPN - Dianna Russini

Toronto Blue Jays third baseman Vladimir Guerrero Jr. won't come up to make his major league debut against the Giants in the series that starts on Tuesday, but he could be brought up for the homestand that begins on Friday against the A's. The top prospect in baseball is over the oblique strain he suffered in spring training and has already resumed torturing minor league pitching at Triple-A Buffalo. He'll immediately become the starting third baseman and the best hitter in Toronto when he makes his big league debut, likely this weekend. He'll provide an immediate boost to fantasy teams and should be owned in all formats already. Brandon Drury will become a utility player when Vlad Jr. arrives.

Mookie Betts 2023 Player Outlook: Safe And Solid Production Set To Contin...

3 months ago After a bit of a down year in 2021, Mookie Betts bounced back in 2022 hitting .269/.340/.533 with 35 homers, 82 RBI, 117 runs and 12 stolen bases in 142 games. Concerns about his power diminishing were cast aside as he set a new career high in homers, fuelled by a jump in his HardHit% (44.9% up from 41.0%) and Barrel% (9.7% up from 7.8%). You might be concerned by his career-high 16.3% K% but that still ranked in the 81st percentile and his 8.6% BB% still ranked in the 55th percentile despite being its lowest since 2017. Gone are the 20+ stolen base days (something he hasn't achieved since 2018) but the bigger bases might help him creep up to ~15 again and double-digit steals should still be achieved regardless of that. As long as Betts continues to be the Dodgers' leadoff hitter, he will still score an elite number of runs and provide solid RBI in that lineup. Currently, with an ADP ~10, Betts is a perfect late first-round option in your drafts. --Jamie Steed - RotoBaller Launched in 2003, the FFPC Playoff Challenge is the longest running and most unique playoff contest in the fantasy football universe.

Just $200 to enter with a $100,000 GRAND PRIZE and a $600,000 total prize pool, paying down to 550th place.

With NO SALARY CAP and NO DRAFT to worry about, simply choose 10 players to make up your team's roster. But there's a catch: you're only allowed to use one player from each NFL team. That means if you choose Tom Brady as your QB, you may not have any other Patriots on your roster.

This will be your roster for the duration of the entire playoffs including the Superbowl. There will not be any changes, substitutions or free agent pickups once rosters are locked. As NFL teams get knocked out so will your players, so choose your team wisely!

The contest is now over 75% full and is capped at 3,500 total entries, so it will sell out as it does every year! Registrations will close on Saturday January, 6th at 4:30pm ET. Don't wait - get your team now and end your fantasy football season with a bang!

Tom Brady Good To Go On Sunday

New England Patriots quarterback Tom Brady (shoulder) stated that he will play on Sunday. Brady has been dealing with a joint strain in his non-throwing shoulder all season which was re-aggravated during the matchup with the Tampa Bay Buccaneers last Thursday. Though he didn't practice for most of this week, he did participate in full on Friday. Brady has thrown for 1,702 yards and 11 touchdowns this season. The Jets give up 16 fantasy points per game but Brady should surpass that without a problem. He is a must start, as always.

FantasyDraft - DFS Quarterback Pick

Russell Wilson vs LA \(\$13,900\)

Can no offensive line stop Wilson? No. Can no running game stop Wilson? No. Can average receivers stop Wilson? No. Can the Jacksonville defense stop Wilson? No. Can anything stop Wilson? Absolutely not. He is an elite option against anyone, including the Los Angeles Rams. Wilson has taken over the Seahawks offense, scoring at least 24 fantasy points in nine of his last 11 games, including two games with 35 or more fantasy points. The Rams feature an above average defense, but the Seahawks have an implied team total of 25 points, meaning Wilson will once again enjoy a great week.

Target Risers & Potential Breakouts, Week 15

by CHRIS MOORE - ROTOBALLER 12/13/17 12:12 PM Follow @ChrisMooreRoto

By Week 15 of the fantasy football season, if you're still playing, there's a fair chance that you're a veritable encyclopedia of NFL statistical knowledge, at least for the current year.

With so much data available, our takes just aren't as hot as they were back in the early part of the season. To the extent that we can safely expect anything in this game we all enjoy, our expectations are grounded in as large a sample size of 2017 football as we can hope for.

Sifting through the Week 14 slate, this Week's Target Risers column will focus on some of the biggest and/or most surprising target totals, and look for actionable intel. Maybe there's still a tidbit or two hiding beneath the surface.

Editor's note: Our friends at DraftEasy are giving you a FREE shot to win $50. Just pick four correct NFL player matchups and win!

70 Howie Kendrick Batting Fifth, Looks To Continue Hot Streak

5/3: Washington Nationals infielder Howie Kendrick will start at second base and bat fifth in Thursday's afternoon contest against the Pirates. He's had a hot start to the season and filled in nicely for the injured Daniel Murphy (knee). Over his last seven games, he's 10-for-27 with two home runs, three doubles, three RBI and five runs scored. He's never faced Wednesday's starter, Trevor Williams, but has an OPS of .911 against right-handed throwers. The veteran makes a fabulous daily pick and should be rostered in leagues of all sizes while he's hot and getting starts. --Mario Hernandez - RotoBaller Source: Washington Nationals
