MOLLY OF DENALI GOES TO KOTZEBUE

A community's embrace

We've long known the special appeal that Molly of Denali has in Alaska beyond its national viewership. This first of its kind animated PBS KIDS program features an Alaska Native as the lead character, Molly Mabray, a 10-year-old Athabascan girl who lives with her parents in the fictional town of Qyah in Interior Alaska.

The power of Indigenous representation is reflected in the enthusiastic embrace Kotzebue showed Molly, who visited the town as part of a recent Alaska Public Media educational initiative held in partnership with the Nikaitchuat Iłisaḡviat Iñupiaq Immersion School. The town organized a parade for Molly led by the fire department and as it progressed block to block, children cheered along the way, with many following close behind on their bikes. On the float with Molly were two Iñupiaq elders that started the immersion school over 24 years ago.

The parade was followed by a meet and greet with Molly and a local Alaska Native team dance and drum performance. In the following two days, children and families participated in a free Ready to Learn camp and family workshop, focusing on STEM and supporting social and emotional learning, led by Stephanie McFadden, Alaska Public Media's Education Director.

With the support of a grant from the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation, Alaska Public Media is bringing free resources to more of rural Alaska and training local teachers on the many free resources available from PBS KIDS on alaskapublic.pbslearningmedia.org.

In building the Molly of Denali show, producers at PBS and Boston public media station GBH worked with Alaska Native writers, producers and advisors to form partnerships, and ensure both authenticity and respect to the subject matter. That inclusion is key to the success of the show and love of Molly by young and old.

Our thanks to Kotzebue and the Nikaitchuat Iłisaḡviat Iñupiaq Immersion School for the wonderful opportunity to learn and share together. Thanks too to our partner public media radio station, KOTZ, for hosting McFadden in a discussion about the camp, workshop, and our appreciation for local member support.

AN ICONIC DOCUMENTARY IS SET TO RETURN

BBC and PBS join forces to bring back Walking with Dinosaurs

Twenty-five years after it first stomped across our TV screens, the iconic Walking with Dinosaurs is returning in a major new BBC Studios production for BBC and PBS, co-produced with ZDF and France Télévisions. Currently in production and arriving in 2025, this new six-part series will take viewers on a unique journey back through time, revealing the incredible life stories of these long-lost giants.

In an exciting reimagining of one of the BBC's best loved factual shows, each episode of Walking with Dinosaurs will tell the dramatic story of an individual dinosaur whose remains are currently being unearthed by the world's leading dinosaur hunters. Thanks to cutting-edge science, experts can reveal how these prehistoric creatures lived, hunted, fought and died more accurately than ever before. As the dinosaur's bones emerge from the ground, the series will bring these prehistoric stories to life with state-of-the-art visual effects - making each episode a gripping dinosaur drama based on the very latest evidence.

Audiences will meet a range of spectacular dinosaur species in an array of prehistoric landscapes. These include a Spinosaurus - the largest carnivorous dinosaur to ever walk the earth - roaming the rivers of ancient Morocco; a youthful Triceratops battling a ravenous T. rex in North America; and a lonely giant Lusotitan risking it all for a love in Portugal.

Jack Bootle, BBC Head of Commissioning, Specialist Factual said, "A whole new generation of viewers is about to fall in love with Walking With Dinosaurs. The original series was one of the most exciting factual shows of all time, and this reinvention builds on that amazing legacy. Each episode is underpinned by the very latest science but is also filled with drama - making this a series for both dino lovers and people who just want to be told a great story."

"Our human fascination with dinosaurs has remained steadfast, and we are excited to bring PBS audiences this reimagined perspective on these dynamic creatures, combining engaging narratives, backed by the latest science," said Sylvia Bugg, PBS Chief Programming Executive and General Manager, General Audience Programming. "As production on this series is in early stages, we look forward to sharing more over the coming year through first-look previews and educational resources, giving audiences a deeper understanding of the dinosaurs' existence."

NATIONAL GEOGRAPHIC PHOTOGRAPHER EXAMINES CHANGE IN THE SEA

Three-part documentary shares the story unfolding in the Gulf of Maine

Sea Change: The Gulf of Maine, a NOVA Special Presentation is a three-part documentary series exploring the Gulf of Maine, a body of water that is warming 97 percent faster than the global ocean, and what that means for the animals, the jobs dependent upon it, and the millions of people along its shores. It features the work of acclaimed underwater and longtime National Geographic photographer Brian Skerry, who has worked to capture the beauty of the area in spite of the devastating impact of climate change over the last 40 years, and is also one of the series' producers. This series is part of a larger project by Skerry to document how warming waters are affecting this unique ecosystem, and includes his cover story on the Gulf of Maine in National Geographic's June issue.

Sea Change blends science, exploration, stunning natural history, and stories of human experience, to illuminate how what happens here could have profound global implications. Viewers will encounter the spectacular wilderness and wildlife that still teems in these waters. The series also documents the range of people including scientists, Native Americans, fishers, and entrepreneurs working to reveal the Gulf's complex history and helping to understand what role the ocean plays in all of our lives.

A marine treasure of some 36,000 square miles, the Gulf of Maine stretches from the tip of Cape Cod to Nova Scotia and is more than a thousand feet deep at its lowest point. It courses with cold, nutrient-rich water, mixed by the world's biggest tides. This rich environment feeds a web of over 3,000 species ranging from microscopic plankton to massive right whales. Millions of people have lived along the Gulf, drawing their sustenance and livelihood from its plentiful depths. It is a seminal body of water, a cradle to ancient peoples, and a lifeline to fragile marine ecosystems. But for all its storied bounty – and because of it – the Gulf is also in peril, with some of its fisheries now depleted to extreme levels.

"I've always had a deep love for the Gulf of Maine as a New England native and a current resident," said Skerry. "Every other breath we take is of oxygen that was generated from our oceans. But they are now in peril, something that we can document deeply in the Gulf of Maine, an area that has provided for this continent long-before the arrival of Europeans and far into the last century. What once provided a seemingly endless supply of cod fish, lobsters, and clams, now allows us to witness firsthand the devastating changes brought on by climate change. It's my hope that this series serves as a cautionary tale, as well as a tribute to one of my favorite places."

Tune in to watch Sea Change on Wednesday, July 24, 31 and August 7 at 9 p.m. on Alaska Public Media TV and streaming on the PBS app and NOVA's YouTube Channel.
