Soloists and Composers

Since sixth grade when she joined choir, Emelia Aceto has had a passion for singing.

That passion led her to begin studying voice about three years ago, and nearly two years ago she began entering singing competitions.

Now, the Highland High School sophomore is on the cusp of global glory as she is one of the final five competitors in the Hammerstein International Youth Solo Contest. The contest is open to those from kindergarten to seniors in college, with Emelia competing in the high school category.

After submitting her video entry in December of her singing "Why Was I Born?" — a piece written, in part, by Oscar Hammerstein — she made her way to the finals through a judging process, with the winner to be announced at 8 p.m. Feb. 12 during a Facebook Live event taped at Hammerstein's house.

Though she has competed in large-scale competitions before, Emelia said she was thrilled about this entire experience.

"Going into it, it's always exciting entering a new competition just to see what happens," Emelia said. "It's just really exciting. Every competition is exciting to see how far I can get and see all the other people that entered too. Especially in the times we're in, it's cool to be able to participate in music somehow."

Should she win, Emelia would receive the grand prize, which includes the opportunity to record her song in Hammerstein's living room, have her video featured on the front page of the Oscar Hammerstein Museum and Theatre Education Center (OHMTEC) website for one month, a $250 cash prize and a Zoom voice lesson with either Justin Guarini, who in 2002 was the runner-up on the first season of "American Idol," or Andrew Polec, an award-winning Broadway performer.

Second place will receive a sheet music collection of more than 50 songs with lyrics by Hammerstein and a $100 cash prize, while third place will receive an OHMTEC shirt and a $50 cash prize.

"Why Was I Born?" was chosen in part because of a suggestion from her voice teacher, Denise Milner Howell, and because of Emelia's fondness of the song's message.

"I really love the way that it constantly goes back to, 'Why was I born? To only love you,'" Emelia said. "It's so unconditional. It's a very touching song. The emotions that are portrayed through it of yearning are just very special."

Musical inclinations are nothing new to the Aceto family. Alongside her father, Chris Aceto, being a singer all his life, Emelia's uncle, Raymond Aceto, is an opera singer and principle artist at the Metropolitan Opera and has served as a large source of inspiration for Emelia.

"I see the talent and I see the gift that my daughter has," Chris Aceto said. "It's been exciting because I look at the unbelievable amount of talent that she has. She's very gifted. I noticed this at a very young age. A lot of what Lia does is self-taught."

For as long as he's been involved in music, Chris Aceto said he has never had to push or nag his daughter to work at her craft or want to be better. And his excitement watching Emelia grow over the last several years has left him as proud as ever.

"I've been around enough successful musicians to know that the ones that are successful are not the ones that their parents had to tell them to go practice," Chris Aceto said. "It's something that they love to do, it's something they do because they want to and enjoy it. I can't remember the last time I had to tell Emelia to go practice her piano or to go sing or prepare for her voice lesson. She does it all on her own."

He added that should Emelia win this competition, it would give the world the opportunity to see that talent that he and his family have seen for so many years now.

"The pride would be amazing," he said. "It would support everything that we think of our daughter and her talent. That other people see it, recognize it and it would just give proof to what we already feel and know for ourselves."

If she were to come out as the winner of this competition, Emelia said it would "mean a lot" to her and also show her not only what she's capable of, but also how far she's come.

"I'd love to have a gauge on where I am and, being able to see that I've made it this far from where I started, it's very special," Emelia said. "It's a great opportunity to push for my career if I do decide to go into music when I'm older. It's very exciting overall."

Marcia Nelson Kline, trumpet duet. Copley resident Marcia Nelson Kline began her trumpet studies with parents Milton and Sarah Nelson, Lloyd Haines, and further advanced her studies with Harry Herforth and James Darling. She is a member of Medina Community Band (since 1984) and Brass Band of the Western Reserve (since 1997) and has performed with Marcus Neiman's Sound of Sousa Band, Mill Street Brass Quintet, and Cleveland Women's Orchestra. She is featured as a cornet soloist on Medina Community Band's CD "Sounds of Summer". Marcia has an associate degree in medical assisting from The University of Akron and is a retired ophthalmic technician from Cleveland Clinic.

Paul V. Rocco, trumpet duet, originally from Brooklyn, New York, studied trumpet at SUNY at Fredonia, later completing a Bachelor's of Fine Arts Music at the University of Akron. While at The University of Akron, he studied with Tucker Jolly and Scott Johnston, continuing with Geoff Hardcastle after graduation. Rocco moved to Ohio to take the position of police officer for the City of Medina, retiring in 2009 after 20 years of service. He became a member of Medina Community Band in 1989. He also performs with the Brass Band of the Western Reserve. Rocco is presently teaching private trumpet lessons for Barberton Middle and High Schools, and Green Middle School. He resides in Medina with wife Gayle, son Gary, three rescue dogs and a cat.

Nathan James, composer, was born on October 25, 1996, in Abingdon (VA) and resides in Monaca, PA. He graduated from Freedom Area High School (PA) and studied music at West Liberty University in West Virginia for two years, then changed direction and attained an Associate Degree in Engineering from the Community College of Beaver County in Pennsylvania.

Nathan experiences with composition starting in the seventh grade. Through a combination of self-teaching and internet research, coupled with some basic college experience with ensembles and arrangement, Nathan dove fully into composing. His compositional abilities run the gamut from Classical to Prog Rock, including 8-bit video game music, sailor shanties, and even D&D character-inspired pieces, but he prefers writing for orchestra, wind band, and brass ensembles. His goal is to compose a full-length film score.

The Fairgrounds Organ March is raucous and fun! Composed and completed on April 12, 2020, the march is an exciting and entertaining offering by a young, and upcoming composer!

Clayton Van Doren, euphonium soloist, lives in Lodi with his wife, Carolyn. Clayton started playing trombone and euphonium in the school band program in Wooster, and played trombone in the Lafayette Community Band for seven years while in graduate school at Syracuse University. He has been a member of the Medina Community Band since 1988. He is a third generation euphonium player, his son Adam is the fourth, and he has hopes that at least one of his grandkids makes it five.

Medina Community Band

Banding together to celebrate a new land. The Medina Community Band traces its beginnings back to 1859, when a group of local wind and percussion players got together (some with formal training - others without) to perform music for the community. That first "community band" was called The Medina Silver Cornet Band, probably since the instruments the musicians used were primarily "silver lacquer coated" cornets or percussion. Since its beginning in 1859, that the band has been in existence, there have been 20 directors. Marcus Neiman has served as conductor since 1972 with John Connors serving as assistant conductor (since 2015), and Matthew Hastings as assistant conductor (since 2019), and Amy Muhl, as assistant conductor (since 2022)

Early versions of the band probably existed at the pleasure of the square's business community, who often funded the season and encouraged patrons to attend the concerts. The performance night has changed over the years, in most cases at the urging of the business community, and season concerts have been given on Sunday, Monday, Tuesday, Thursday, Friday, and Saturday evenings. Since the 1970s, the band has been supported by donations from the general public and, to this day, is supported through these donations. Band members donate their time and talent to rehearsing and performing for the community as members of the ensemble.

Since the 1970s, Medina Community Band has traveled outside Medina to perform: Ashland Brookside Bandstand (1980, 81, 93); Bay Village (Connections Series 1990, 91, 92); Canton (Kent State Stark Community Band Exchange Concerts 1995, 96, 98, 99); Case Western Reserve University (Cleveland Youth Winds Exchange concerts – Severance Hall – 2002 and 07, Medina, 2005); Cleveland State University (2010, 13); Dalton (Wayne County Schools Honors Bands 1983); Mentor (Lakeland Civic Band Festival 1985 and 1990); Mercer (PA) (with Mercer Community Band, 2009); Milan (EHOVE Career Center, 1993-2007); and, Wadsworth (Wadsworth Community Band Festival 2007). In February of 2015, Medina Community Band was selected by blind audition to perform at the Ohio Music Education Association Professional Development Conference in Cleveland.

Regional and nationally known conductors have appeared with Medina Community Band. Since the 1970, the following individuals have appeared as guest conductors: David Adamson; William Bauer (Florida State University); Frank Cosenza (Mentor, OH); Albert Oliver Davis; Paul Droste (Ohio State University), John Boyd (Indiana State University); Wayne Gorder (Kent State University); John Franklin (Kent State University); Patricia Ann Grutzmacher (Kent State University); Richard Jackoboice (University of Akron); Robert Jorgensen (University of Akron); Galen Karriker (University of Akron); Jesse Leyva (Kent State University); Gene Milford (University of Akron); Nathan Muehl (St. Petersburg College, Florida); Bill Park (North Royalton Community Band); David Seiberling (Moore Community Band); Edmund J. Siennicki; and, Nathan Stark (Montana State University).

The following individuals have been commissioned, or have written, or arranged, works for Medina Community Band: Douglas Court; Albert Oliver Davis; Robert Feldbush; Percy Hall; Floyd O. Harris; Stuart Ling; Gene Milford; Bill Park; Tadd Russo; David Schaffer; David Seiberling; Edmund J. Siennicki; Gail Sigmund; and, Jonathan Tietz.

Medina Community Band is sponsored by the Medina Community Band Association composed of members of The Medina Community Band proudly supports the community band. Membership in MCB is open and there are no dues or auditions; however, members are expected to maintain a regular attendance. When in session, the band rehearses on Wednesday evening from 7p - 9p in gymnasium of Brunswick St. Ambrose Church/School, 929 Pearl Rd. (US Rte 42) Brunswick, Ohio 44212). During normal seasons, the band also presents their popular summer series every Friday, June through July, in Medina's Uptown Park Gazebo. Each year the band presents at a winter concert, and spring concert.
