In focus

Rural schools

Rural schools and their communities can support and revitalise each other; for example, reducing the digital gap is equally important to both. Even small joint actions can make a difference to overcoming the challenges of rural schooling, such as teacher shortages. In addition, local vocational schools can act as promoters of the green and digital transitions in rural communities. However, actions are also needed in rural areas to ensure access to services for children or to integrate migrant and refugee pupils. Innovation and inventiveness are essential in the rural context, as we learn from these European projects and case studies, which demonstrate what “small but fierce” means in practice. Learn more about rural schools’ internationalisation strategies and how they can capitalise on eTwinning projects.
