Course Objective: Seminars are intended to allow students to learn and integrate knowledge and information across disciplines such as arts, humanities, and social sciences, through independent study. Students individually present a seminar on a current topic followed by a review. The idea is to improve students' Time Management, Planning and Prioritization - Attitude, Verbal and Nonverbal Skills - Communication Skills - Etiquette and Interview Skills. Students are to connect with an NGO, Corporate, Media organization and the like for quality ideas for presentation. This would also help build student portfolio and networking.

Course Outcomes: At the end of the course students will be able to:

1. Identify and understand current, real-world issues.
2. Explore real-world issues through transformational experiences and industry (governmental/non-governmental/private) interaction that foster an understanding of self, relationships, and diverse global perspectives.
3. Acquire, articulate, create and convey intended meaning using verbal and non-verbal method of communication that demonstrates respect and understanding in a complex society.
4. Apply a multidisciplinary strategy to address differing forms of knowledge and academic disciplinary approaches with their own academic discipline (e.g., in agriculture, architecture, art, business, economics, education, natural resources, etc.)
5. Apply principles of ethics and respect in interaction with others.

Course Objective: Equip students to edit news dispatches, press releases, speeches into news reports that are grammatically correct and of interest to the readers.

Course Outcomes: By the end of the course the students will be able to:

1. Edit news reports of different genres – spot news, features, interviews, in-depth stories – without grammatical and syntax errors and in an engaging style.
2. Ensure that news reports are structured in the classic Inverted Pyramid style and carry headlines that are specific to grab the readers’ eyes.
3. Develop an inherent nature to double-check facts and figures so that mistakes do not creep into the publications and readers get correct information.
4. Understand the importance of proper attribution for authenticity and credibility of a report and drawing a reporter’s/correspondent’s attention when such attribution is lacking.
5. Understand that news reports have to be fair and balanced and edit them in such a manner to ensure they are so.
6. Understand the laws of libel and ensure that defamatory and one-sided reports do not find space in a publication.
7. Understand the importance of meeting deadlines and at the same realising speed cannot be at the cost of accuracy.

The student is exposed to a theoretical quantitative and qualitative research process in the first semesters. As a follow through practical application of research, he/she ideates individually on a preferred area of research interest related to any field of Mass Communication within the traditions of social and behavioural sciences. A Research Guide is assigned to each student to help him/her through the process of preparing a Research Proposal. A two credit internal research review is undertaken at this phase, and the student is expected to have the ontology, epistemology and methodology and data collection pertaining to his/her research proposal in place. The evaluation by the review committee will be based on parameters such as feasibility of topic, literature review and identification of theoretical and methodological framework and data collection.

Course Objective: Seminars are intended to allow students to learn and integrate knowledge and information across disciplines such as arts, humanities, and social sciences, through independent study. Students individually present a seminar on a current topic followed by a review. The idea is to improve students' Time Management, Planning and Prioritization - Attitude, Verbal and Nonverbal Skills - Communication Skills - Etiquette and Interview Skills. Students are to connect with an NGO, Corporate, Media organization and the like for quality ideas for presentation. This would also help build student portfolio and networking.

Course Outcomes: At the end of the course students will be able to:

1. Identify and understand current, real-world issues.
2. Explore real-world issues through transformational experiences and industry (governmental/non-governmental/private) interaction that foster an understanding of self, relationships, and diverse global perspectives.
3. Acquire, articulate, create and convey intended meaning using verbal and non-verbal method of communication that demonstrates respect and understanding in a complex society.
4. Apply a multidisciplinary strategy to address differing forms of knowledge and academic disciplinary approaches with their own academic discipline (e.g., in agriculture, architecture, art, business, economics, education, natural resources, etc.)
5. Apply principles of ethics and respect in interaction with others.

Internships are intended to give students practical work experience in journalism, new media, broadcast production, and advertising. It is mandatory for the students to complete the internship in a media organization [Print, Broadcast (television and radio), Photography, Online content writing, Web designing, Advertising, Digital Marketing, Public Relations-Corporate communication and Event Management) for a period of at least 5 months, commencing from the end of the 3rd semester. A report should be submitted by the end of the 3rd semester, failing which the students will be marked with an F grade. The internship report should consist of internship certificate, company profile, nature of work done, job progress, work diary on a daily basis, documents/ scanned copies of work done for the organization. For example, published news reports, photographs, design, online content, and creative work. The students will be allowed to intern only after the completion of their 3rd semester. Ideally the student interns in one or two media organizations.
