Dear Friends,

It is a great privilege to be able to welcome you to FIBA Women's EuroBasket 2023 on behalf of FIBA Europe for the 39th edition of this esteemed competition. Ljubljana and Tel Aviv are two fantastic cities, and we are sure that Slovenia and Israel will be more than accommodating hosts over the course of the next 10 days.

I know how much of an honor it is to host this fantastic event having seen first hand the collective efforts and joy that went into bringing the FIBA Women's EuroBasket tournament to Valencia two years ago. I am sure it will prove to be another amazing spectacle as the level of talent across women's basketball continues to grow.

The long road to this point began in November 2021 for the first of three windows in the Qualifiers as 14 teams battled to secure their tickets alongside the two hosts with the final lineup confirmed earlier this year.

These tournaments are always a great way for the basketball community to come together as a celebration, whilst passionately cheering on favorite players and beloved nations. I truly believe we are better together when it comes to pushing forward basketball in Europe, and this is another opportunity to see the progress that is being made and to keep striving for more.

I would like to wish the very best of luck to all of the participating players, coaches and officials at FIBA Women's EuroBasket 2023 and look forward to seeing you there.

Best regards,

Jorge Garbajosa
FIBA Europe President

Dear Friends,

Please allow me to welcome you to the FIBA Women's EuroBasket 2023. We are extremely excited for the latest edition of this highly anticipated event as the best of the best battle it out to be crowned champions of Europe.

The proud recent tradition of two host countries continues with Slovenia and Israel as they take the baton from Spain and France following the success of FIBA Women's EuroBasket 2021. The previous tournament still felt the effects of the COVID-19 pandemic, so it brings great joy to be able to fully open the doors and welcome the basketball community.

Serbia were deserved winners for a second time two years ago in Valencia when they defeated France in the Final. We have a new trophy for this event, and it is the beauty of our sport with its unpredictable nature that all 16 teams will arrive in Ljubljana and Tel Aviv with high hopes as they dare to dream of going all the way and achieving great success.

There is much to play for even beyond the medals of the top three with five teams in total securing their places for the Olympic Qualifying Tournaments to be held in 2024 ahead of the Paris Games.

I would also like to thank the two Local Organizing Committees for their unwavering dedication and hard work in putting on this great celebration of basketball.

The FIBA Women's EuroBasket 2023 promises to be another great tournament and my best wishes go to all the participants and those involved in helping make this such a special event.

Best regards,

Kamil Novak
FIBA Executive Director Europe

Slovenia feels basketball

Dear basketball players, coaches, participants of the 39th FIBA Women's EuroBasket, dear guests, fans and all basketball friends!

It is a great honor and pleasure for me to welcome you all together at the women's edition of the old continent's championship, exactly ten years after FIBA EuroBasket 2013 in Ljubljana. We at the Basketball Federation of Slovenia are extremely proud to have been entrusted by the Executive Board of FIBA Europe, together with Israel, with the hosting of this outstanding event. I am sure that we are in for a real basketball feast in Stožice, which will remain a great memory for everyone.

Slovenia feels basketball. Basketball workers and basketball fans in Slovenia are eagerly awaiting the opening throw of the referee to mark the start of the Championship. Since we started to work intensively on the organization, many fond memories of 2013 have come to the surface.

The impact of the European Championships on Slovenian sport, the economy, tourism and indeed the country as a whole was remarkable, and we only wish it can be the same this time. At the same time, many sincere friendships were forged, of which we are particularly proud.

I would like to thank the members of the organizing committee and all those involved in the organization of the Championships for their contribution and efforts to make the event a success, the participants satisfied and Slovenia presenting itself to Europe as a country of capable people and great deeds.

At the same time, I cannot fail to thank the Slovenian State Summit, the relevant ministries, the city of Ljubljana and all the sponsors and partners of FIBA Women's EuroBasket 2023 who recognized the importance of the project and supported it to the best of their abilities.

I believe that the fans in Stožice will see for themselves that the ladies are playing great basketball. I wish all the national teams the best of luck at the Championship. First and foremost, I hope that our June gathering passes without any injuries. Women, enjoy yourselves on the floor and may basketball win.

Good luck!

Matej Erjavec

President of the Basketball Federation of Slovenia

Slovenija čuti košarko (Slovenia feels basketball)

Spoštovane košarkarice, spoštovani trenerji, cenjeni udeleženci 39. ženskega EuroBasketa, dragi gostje in navijači ter vsi košarkarski prijatelji!

V veliko čast in zadovoljstvo mi je, da vas natanko deset let po moškem evropskem prvenstvu v Ljubljani vse skupaj lahko pozdravimo še na ženski izvedbi prvenstva stare celine. Na Košarkarski zvezi Slovenije smo izjemno ponosni, da nam je Izvršni odbor FIBA Europe skupaj z Izraelom zaupal izvedbo tega izjemnega dogodka. Prepričan sem, da nas v Stožicah čaka pravi košarkarski praznik, ki bo vsem ostal v lepem spominu.

Slovenija čuti košarko. Košarkarski delavci ter ljubitelji košarke v Sloveniji nestrpnno pričakujemo uvodni sodniški met in s tem začetek prvenstva. Vse od trenutka, ko smo se začeli intenzivno ukvarjati z organizacijo, so številni prijetni spomini iz leta 2013 privreli na plan.

Učinki takratnega evropskega prvenstva so bili za slovenski šport, gospodarstvo, turizem in pravzaprav na državo nasploh izjemni in le želimo si, da bi bilo tako tudi tokrat. Hkrati pa so se stkala številna iskrena prijateljstva, na kar smo še posebej ponosni

Članom organizacijskega odbora ter vsem, ki so vpleteni v organizacijo prvenstva se zahvaljujem za prispevek in trud, ki so ga namenili za to, da bo dogodek uspešen, udeleženci zadovoljni in da se bo Slovenija Evropi predstavila kot država sposobnih ljudi in velikih dejanj.

Hkrati ne morem mimo zahvale slovenskemu državnemu vrhu, pristojnim ministrstvom, mestu Ljubljana in vsem sponzorjem ter partnerjem EuroBasketa, ki so prepoznali pomembnost projekta in ga podprli po svojih najboljših močeh.

Verjamem, da se bodo navijači v Stožicah na lastne oči prepričali, da dekleta igrajo odlično košarko. Vsem reprezentancam na prvenstvu želim veliko sreče. V prvi vrsti pa, da naše junijsko druženje mine brez poškodb. Dekleta, uživajte na parketu in naj zmaga košarka.

Srečno!

Matej Erjavec
predsednik Košarkarske zveze Slovenije

HOST CITY LJUBLJANA

Ljubljana is one of the smallest European capitals with a population of 293,000. It's never too crowded – but also never boring. Around 50,000 university students give it its youthful appeal, and as an economic and cultural hub of Slovenia, it has a lot to offer to locals and visitors alike. Ljubljana is renowned for its relaxed atmosphere and is well known for being an extremely picturesque and green city. The Old Town is full of outstanding architecture, a combination of styles from different periods in history - most notably the Baroque - bound together into one of the 20th century's most amazing total works of art by the famous Ljubljana-born architect and urban planner Joze Plecnik. The ongoing commitment to sustainability and a number of high-profile international accolades make Ljubljana a destination whose overall tourist development has been carefully planned and well thought-out.

One of the things that contribute to the residents' satisfaction with the quality of life, and are also important to visitors, is the feeling of safety. According to the safety index compiled by Numbeo (2020), Ljubljana ranks as high as 11th among 129 European cities and Slovenia as high as 8th among 80 countries worldwide. Ljubljana is a city built on a human scale and one that puts its people first. The city center has long ago banished cars to make room for more outdoor cafes and restaurants, cultural events, open-air markets, bike lanes, shopping areas and much more. The joy of living in this city emanates from its every corner. Come and let the Ljubljana variety of dolce vita come over you.

THE BRAND-NEW FIBA WOMEN'S EUROBASKET TROPHY

The redesigned FIBA Women's EuroBasket trophy was presented at the FIBA Women's EuroBasket 2023 draw in Slovenia, marking a new era for Europe's flagship women's basketball competition.

The sleek and elegant design seeks to provide the premium tournament a representation of its offer with a trophy that holds true to its traditions whilst emulating the values of the competition in contemporary way.

Made from 16 unique cast shapes representing the number of teams, it comes together to form a blossoming flower-like symbol.

With gold interior and silver exterior with hints of gold, it mirrors the men's trophy in an elegant manner, strengthening the cohesion between the two competitions, and also holds a recognizable silhouette of its predecessor.

The re-design of FIBA's trophies is part of the ongoing process of enhancing the brand and position of FIBA's competitions, which began in 2017.

The new trophy will be awarded for the first time at FIBA Women's EuroBasket 2023, with the Final taking place at the Stožice Arena in Ljubljana.

MONTENEGRO

OUT TO EXTEND THE TRACK RECORD OF UPSETS

Still one of the FIBA Women's EuroBasket all-time fairytales, relative minnows Montenegro are taking to the court for a phenomenal seventh straight appearance. Amazing for a country who only debuted at the event in 2011 and has managed to spoil the party for so many of their opponents.

Back again, the track record and now a rich underdog tradition is likely to be extended. The caveat for an eye-catching run from Montenegro is that they didn't exactly impress in the Qualifiers when facing only Austria and Denmark, even losing to the latter in one of the matchups.

Nevertheless, they made it through and will be quietly confident of success and maybe repeating the Quarter-Finals slot they landed on their debut 12 years ago and then also in 2015 too.

Even if the qualifying campaign was barely mediocre performance and results-wise, there are a couple of reasons for the Montenegro team and fans to be more confident than a lot of neutrals. Firstly, they know that their younger ballers played some brilliant basketball at youth level last summer and have shown nice maturity and progress since.

Secondly, they have replenished their naturalized choice, moving from Markeisha Gatling to the powerful and talented forward Natasha Mack who might prove to be a walking double-double if she can find a high gear as the team hopes.

Head coach Jelena Skerovic could have argued her frontcourt rotation is as good as most now that Mack is on board. She was penciled in to play alongside the veteran warrior Jelena Dubljevic. However, she announced her retirement in the leadup and the team will certainly miss her trademark intensity at both ends of the floor

While somewhat more understated but no less effective, Milica Jovanovic could be back and the forward is one of the most underrated frontcourt stars around. She got injured playing with DVTK last year in Hungary and missed a chunk of the club seasons, so should have plenty still left in the tank, but hopefully not undercooked.

As usual, the backcourt and wings will determine how successful Montenegro can be. It's where they arguably have less in terms of players competing regularly at the very highest level, but they at least do still have experience to get them through. The trio of Bozica Mujovic, Jelena Vucetic and Jovana Pasic have all seen and done it many times before, so they will carry the main load.

Meanwhile, there is excitement over the possible contribution of some younger players such as teenage playmaker, Marija Lekovic who continues to be on an impressive upwards trajectory.

The mission has not really changed for Montenegro over the years and is likely to remain the same again. They will make life difficult for everyone they face and will look to make the most of their interior players in particular to fuel their prospects of adding more upsets to their impressive 12-year resume.

The forward has a valid claim to be considered as one of the most underrated forwards in the European game since she has often been overshadowed by some of her peers. However, her country will once again benefit from her experience and quality in the frontcourt.

With fellow veteran Jelena Dubljevic unavailable, there is added responsibility on the shoulders of Jovanovic, but she will relish the challenge. Not least because her EuroLeague Women club season with Miskolc was cut short by an injury and so she will be raring to go.

A very capable scorer and rebounder, she has been with Montenegro from the beginning and this will be a staggering seventh consecutive appearance at the FIBA Women's EuroBasket and is looking to register a double-digit scoring return for the third edition in a row.

LATVIA

BACK WITH SOME BOUNCE IN THEIR STEPS

After a very positive qualifying campaign which saw Gundars Vetra and his team navigate their way past both Israel and Sweden in a tricky three team group, their unbeaten run has made people sit up and take notice again.

Not least because they didn't even make it to the Final Round two years ago and having missed out in Strasbourg and Valencia, they're back with reason to be confident they can continue the good work from those Qualifiers.

While the retirement less than two months ago of experienced playmaker Elina Babkina is no doubt a blow because of the scoring, creative touch and know-how she brought, cast your eye down this roster and there is still an exciting fusion of veterans and rising stars.

We will soon see how this comes together, but the bounce that Latvia have in their steps right now is that competition for spots in this roster was probably as fierce as it has been for quite some time.

Plus, if we push the rewind button just six years ago, Latvia showed what is possible when they made the Quarter-Finals and claimed a top six spot during the 2017 edition.

Anete Steinberga was an absolute warrior and colossus at that tournament and having not played at Final Round since, it is very likely that her presence can spark the same kind of run – if things come together for the team. She will be pushing for a double-double in every game she plays, while also setting the standard physically and playing some hard-nosed defense.

Pushing her hard for the status of being Latvia's marquee player is Kitija Laksa, who was also terrific at the 2017 edition. While Steinberga was a handful in the paint, her teammate rained down triples and has since shown in EuroLeague Women that she can be an elite level scorer.

There is a big dose of precious experience and capability in the shape of Ieva Pulvere and Aija Jurjane too. These Galatasaray colleagues will reunite for national team duties, with the former oozing smarts and the ability to knock down the three, while Jurjane will bring it in the paint.

There is excitement around the emerging players such as forward Aleksa Gulbe who played with Perfumierias Avenida last season and also Digna Strautmene who could win her fitness race having played in the competition with Olympiacos before she was sidelined.

The main challenge looks set to be distributing the minutes and production of the now departed Babkina. The guard dished out more than 7 assists per game in the qualifying games before hanging up her game shoes and now someone has to pick up that responsibility.

The bigs will be ready to go to work and with shooting talent like Laksa and Pulvere, Latvia can utilize a nicely balanced inside-outside game. But so much is going to hinge on them having someone who can execute, dictate the tempo and slow down the opposition too.

Ilze Jakobsona will be ready to step up and her success or otherwise may have a significant bearing on whether Latvia fade away or continue their momentum of qualification and post a repeat of their run to the Quarter-Finals in 2017.

One of the most accomplished frontcourt performers in Europe and also bringing vast experience as a veteran star of this team, Steinberga is back in the lineup at the Final Round for the first time since 2017. If she can repeat anything like the form from that edition when she racked up a remarkable tournament double-double, then Latvia could be in business for a repeat of their Quarter-Finals slot.

She was badly missed on their last outing in 2019 at the event and they will be grateful to have Steinberga bringing the team a gloriously hard-nosed edge again. It will be much needed at this level, with her impressive physicality and intensity matched by her basketball skills and know-how.

The center comes into the competition having helped Tango Bourges Basket to the EuroLeague Women Quarter-Finals and also having led her nation in points, rebounds and efficiency during the qualifying campaign.

SPAIN

READY TO RISE BACK UP AGAIN

Failing to make the Semi-Finals at the previous edition in their role as both co-hosts and reigning champions was a tremendous blow for Spain – as was missing out on the FIBA Women's Basketball World Cup 2022 in Sydney.

In reality it merely confirmed the need for the pause button to be pressed and some much-needed reflection after the end of a glorious run under Lucas Mondelo which had seen plenty of silverware and historical firsts achieved.

A reboot was initiated and that started with the respected playcaller Miguel Mendez picking up the coaching reins. So far, the signs have been very positive after an unbeaten qualifying campaign which saw the younger and emerging players shining.

Even if 2019 tournament MVP Astou Ndour is unavailable for the current mission which is undeniably a blow, the roster still looks packed with talent and a nice mix of experience and youth.

Without Ndour, it's time for Raquel Carrera to show why she is one of the best players of her generation, not only in Europe, but in the world. The frontcourt star has been tearing it up for Valencia Basket in these last couple of club seasons and she is capable, despite her tender years, of leading Spain in the paint.

Spain also possesses two class leaders when it comes to shifting the momentum and making clutch shots from the wings. Any team containing both Alba Torrens and Maria Conde must be instantly thrust into contention for the title, or at the very least, a podium finish.

Torrens has had some injury frustrations in this past season, but will hopefully be back near her brilliant best, while Conde has also spent some time on the sidelines too, but her passion, intensity and skills mean she could be the number one baller for Spain in this competition.

The backcourt has so much experience and certainly more than any other team around. Silvia Dominguez, Cristina Ouvina and Leo Rodriguez have been there and done it at all the top tournaments. Maite Cazorla is also a vital part of the rotation having established herself as an accomplished EuroLeague Women performer.

In fact, this entire roster is dripping in players who have made a splash in elite club competitions or previous national team tournaments and that is why you have to think that Spain are highly unlikely to fall short for a second time in a row.

The frontcourt remains the only question mark because of an arguable lack of depth, but the steady presence of a warrior like Laura Gil dilutes any fears – along with the form of young Carrera. Besides, Spain never had huge options under the basket and yet still rode their way to titles.

They may have someone new to oversee matters with Coach Mendez but will have a similar style to past editions. The 'Spanish way' of playing permeates through teams at all levels, including the senior side and we can expect to see tempo, defensive intensity, transition and a dynamic approach that should have fans engaged.

It is also likely to serve as the main ingredients for Spain rising back up, with many observers not questioning whether they will return to the podium or not – just what step they will end up standing on.

Team 2022-23: ZVVZ USK Praha (Czech Republic-ZBL)

It feels like the time is now for Conde to assume the role as the new and clear leader for Spain as they embark on a new chapter and look to get back challenging for the title.

The winger brings the quality and her trademark passion and intensity to the national team and that is a big bonus for Spain who will benefit from her ability to influence games in a big way with her do-it-all displays.

Fearless and able to score from range or slicing to the bucket, it's tough to slow Conde down when she starts turning up the dial, so it will not be a surprise if she is the leading offensive contributor for her country at this event.

She has already shown her class in EuroLeague Women while impressing for ZVVZ USK Praha since the last FIBA Women's EuroBasket and this is destined to be her most impactful yet.

GREECE

READY TO SPOIL THE PARTY

Having finished in last spot two years ago, few people will be predicting Greece to make a strong run towards the latter stages, but they're still more than capable of causing an upset.

In fact, they have recent history when it comes to delivering shocks, making a stunning run to the Semi-Finals just six years ago when nobody had given them a chance of even reaching the last eight.

They will step out at this edition happily wearing the label of underdogs and knowing that anyone who underestimates them could be left stung.

Not least because they have the terrific Maria Fasoula, who is a phenomenal force when wearing a national team jersey. In her new role as a leader, she will likely lead in scoring thanks to her size, skill and fantastic shot selection, as well as going to work on the glass. The center comes into this edition having excelled with Perfumerias Avenida and having made the All EuroLeague Women Second Team.

Fasoula forms a nice one-two punch in the paint with Artemis Spanou, whose relentless and aggressive approach epitomizes the way Greece will approach this competition. Not just an experienced warrior, the forward will challenge her frontcourt partner when it comes to leading the way in points and rebounds, having had another excellent year in EuroLeague Women with BC Polkowice.

There is incredible experience in the team, with Aikaterina Sotiriou and Evdokia Stamati aged 39 and 38 respectively. Having seen and done it all before, they've been written off at the Final Round previously but have made people choke on their predictions. The veteran duo played in every game of the Qualifiers and are gold dust for Coach Petros Prekas in terms of talking to and influencing his younger players.

A huge bonus for Greece will be the presence of the talented Eleanna Christinaki, who missed the last edition in Valencia with a serious injury. Averaging double-digits in the Qualifiers, the wing will be hoping to make the plays needed to turn up the dial and repeat or increase that production.

Elsewhere on the roster, Eleni Bosgana is a highly-rated teenager who debuted two years ago at the Final Four but will be a far greater influence this time around. The same can be said if the athletic Elena Tsineke is in the lineup.

The backcourt will be key and there will be a lot of responsibility on Anna Stamolamprou and Pinelopi Pavlopoulou to raise their game if Greece want to make some surprises.

What matters most is that group-wise, Spain will be runaway favorites, but in Latvia and Montenegro they have two winnable games on paper. And, Greece will no doubt want to avenge their defeat to the latter who blew a hole in their prospects by beating them in the group stage two years ago.

Matching six years ago and making the Semi-Finals looks unlikely, but improving on that 16th spot last time is something they will certainly be aiming for. Perhaps the realistic outlook is something in between those book ends of success and falling short.

Fasoula is a leading light for Greece now and has taken big strides even since her last Final Round appearance, as evidenced by her inclusion in this season's All-EuroLeague Women Second Team for her work in the competition with Perfumerias Avenida.

An imposing physical presence, she is someone who can use it effectively in both the high and low post, with her shot selection particularly impressive and a major contributor to her classy and efficient performances. Daughter of a former men's EuroBasket champion, Fasoula is from a basketball family and it shows in her game.

Leading Greece in efficiency, scoring and rebounding during their qualification campaign, expect Fasoula to repeat that feat at the main event this time around, as she looks to spearhead her nation's quest to improve on their 16th place finish two years ago.

HEADING INTO THE UNKNOWN?

Quite a bit has changed since the Cats turned up for the previous edition and ended up standing on the third step of the podium for the second time in their history. It was bitter-sweet, since while they were grateful to replicate their bronze medal success of 2017, the experience was tinged with regret having felt they could and should have made their first ever title game.

Since signing off in Valencia, they are onto their third coach. The long-serving Philip Mestdagh who skillfully shaped Belgium's success and delicious brand of basketball having been replaced by Valery Demory, who in turn, has been succeeded by Rachid Meziane.

Additionally, there has been a loss of some players central to Belgium's epic rise to the top tier of the women's game, including the likes of the now retired Kim Mestdagh and Marjorie Carpreaux.

They still have their marquee star in Emma Meesseman who is universally recognized as one of the top players in the world and with her on board anything is possible. As she has demonstrated so many times, including All-Star Five spots in 2017 and 2021. Meesseman is capable of putting this team on her back and carrying them through when needed. Whether it is scoring, clutch plays, rebounding, passing or playing defense, she will do it to the highest level.

Yet even taking into account her immeasurable skills and influence, Meesseman has recently admitted that even she is not sure where Belgium should pitch expectations.

The caution is understandable with the coaching changes and loss of some experienced personnel, but surely another podium finish is a strong possibility?

Julie Allemand is such a quality playmaker and even if she is recovering from some injury issues, will no doubt demonstrate once again that she is one of the best in the competition.

While the loss of Mestdagh's three-point power in particular might be missed, the arrival of Hind Ben Abdelkader back onto the scene after her lengthy hiatus from national team action is a huge boost. Julie Vanloo is also a massively capable performer and so the guard spots look nicely stocked with players that can deliver.

Antonia Delaere continues to be one of the most underrated small forwards around and the Umana Reyer wing will be a rock as always for her country. Battling for some minutes in that position is one of the Cats' rising stars in the shape of the dynamic and athletic Maxuella Lisowa-Mbaka who just posted a strong season in EuroCup Women.

As well as Meesseman patrolling the paint, look out for Kyara Linskens who will have a big job to do alongside her, as might young Billie Massey. Meanwhile, we could also get to see Bethy Mununga for the first time at the Final Round, with the powerhouse forward having put up phenomenal numbers with ACS Sepsi-Sic in EuroCup Women this season.

So yes, there are some reasons why Belgium might feel they are heading into the unknown. Yet equally, it also feels like so many of the ingredients needed for medal success will be available and so now we hold our collective breath in anticipation to see what way it goes.

Few players in world basketball have the kind of gravitas, influence and all-around brilliance when representing their national teams than the outstanding Meesseman. Her track record is stunning and her qualities are straight from the top drawer. Ever since she debuted in 2017 she has lit it up in a massive way, inspiring Belgium to their historic bronze medal at that first edition, also landing herself in the All-Star Five.

Meanwhile at the last edition in 2021, she repeated the feat as the standout figure for the Cats with another All-Star Five berth off the back of delivering another bronze for Belgium. Even in between during 2019 when Belgium didn't fulfil their potential, Meesseman still showed out and finished in the top three for scoring at the tournament.

This time around, the new-look Cats might be venturing into the unknown, but you can take it to the bank that Meesseman will be a tour de force yet again.

ITALY

THE START OF SOMETHING SPECIAL?

After years of fuelling a stunning youth talent pipeline, Italy may be about to enter an era when they will harvest such spectacular fruits and begin to realize their potential to become a leading women's basketball nation.

That is the optimistic vision of course, but why not? After all, they have a quality blend of experience and rising stars ready to make a splash – plus a load more who have impressed in FIBA youth tournaments waiting in the wings for future editions.

For the past few tournaments, the Quarter-Finals have been the clearly stated ambition, but at the past four editions they have achieved this only once – in 2017 when they finished 7th. Heading into this year's competition, surely they can not only aspire for the Quarter-Finals, but perhaps also target and chase down a top five finish.

Their 9th spot two years ago in Valencia felt like an under achievement, but with the younger players having had precious extra experience since then, some new teenage young guns arriving and pushing for places, plus Italian basketball riding the positive wave of Beretta Famila Schio's historic run to the EuroLeague Women Final Four, the feel good factor is fierce.

Importantly, Italy still have their leader and clutch baller Cecilia Zanadalsini who showed the way in 2017 when she erupted onto the scene and inspired that Quarter-Finals ticket with some epic performances. She will be able to share that experience with the younger members of the roster. Meanwhile she will also be looking to replicate those displays herself and put Italy onto the front foot with all of her amazing offensive capabilities and desire to have the ball in her hands at the death.

As mentioned, Schio's run has given a platform for many players to show their value and talent at the highest club level, including Jasmine Keys in particular. The forward is likely to play a far different role from 2021 and see a significant boost in both minutes and influence off the back of her classy offerings in EuroLeague Women.

Her Schio teammate Costanza Verona will also likely pick up playmaking duties and she has been a real standout figure, so is great competition for the experienced Nicole Romeo in the backcourt.

There is also likely to be a spot for the brilliant youngster Matilde Villa who has turned heads with her exceptional performances at youth level. She is rated highly by everyone and is likely to be a leading figure for the next 10-15 years for her country. Meanwhile, Ilaria Panzera is another big talent who continues to push for selection and is one to potentially watch out for.

The frontcourt will also have Olbis Andre using her size and rebounding prowess to great effect, Martina Bestagno offering her know-how, with the likes of Sara Madera, Valeria Trucco and Lorela Cubaj likely challenging for court time too.

The real beauty of this Italian team is the depth of options compared to previous years. The spread of minutes during the qualifiers demonstrates the level of competition within the squad and now opportunity knocks loudly. Not only in this edition, but in this next era in general. Italian fans have every reason to be excited by what awaits.

The FIBA Women's EuroBasket has always held a special place in the basketball journey of Zandalasini. It was during a spectacular debut in 2017 when she truly announced her arrival on the big stage and made the world sit up and take notice of her skills. Such was the impression made, she gained All-Star Five status even though Italy finished in a modest 7th place.

Second top scorer in the whole competition during 2017, Zandalasini has since top scored for Italy at both the 2019 and 2021 editions, so expect that trend to continue. The winger has it all from an offensive standpoint and can score from so many different positions on the court. A momentum-shifter and a baller built for the clutch, Zandalasini is not just a go-to player, but is also a leader on the floor for her country.

CZECH REPUBLIC

WILL THEY STOP THE FINAL ROUND ROT?

It's to their absolute credit that a relatively short-handed Czech Republic find themselves back at the top table and competing again, having posted an eye-catching qualifying campaign.

There is also a strong sense of déjà vu about this scenario since this has been the case for the last few years - only for their appearances at the Final Round to end up in real disappointment. They were 15th of 16 two years ago, also finishing in the same spot in 2019, having posted a 13th placed finish as hosts in 2017.

It's a far cry from the halcyon days of the past when Czech Republic won the title in 2005, or when only 13 years ago, found themselves competing with the USA in the FIBA Women's Basketball World Cup 2010 title game. Things have certainly changed. If not dramatically, then undeniably a lot.

Successfully rediscovering past triumphs and high tide marks does not feel realistic. While a first Quarter-Finals ticket in a decade sounds nice, surely the first aim for this current Czech team is to improve on the last two or three Final Round appearances by causing some surprises in their new status as underdogs.

To emerge as surprise packages, they will rely heavily on the experience of Renata Brezinova, their captain and rock - someone who will provide a great foundation to build from at this tournament. Especially since the team has received the hammer blow of losing marquee center Julia Reisingerova to an injury.

Thankfully forward Natalie Stoupalova has been tremendous in the preparation games and could be a real sleeper at this tournament for her team. If she continues this form, it will really help fill the void left by the absent Reisingerova.

Having effective players with double-digit scoring returns is going to be the biggest challenge for head coach Romana Ptackova. The playcaller took the reins midway through the qualifying process from her predecessor Stefan Svitek and the fact she is renowned in her homeland for working with younger players is also evidence that the Czechs are turning a page and in transition.

If they are to find the offensive firepower they need to keep pace at this event, then it will most likely have to be another collective effort. There will certainly be pressure on the backcourt and wings to produce, with a strong emphasis on ZVVZ USK Praha colleagues Veronika Vorackova and Tereza Vyoralova. Both have been playing EuroLeague Women for many seasons and have several Final Round appearances previously, so know what the top level is all about. Vorackova in particular will be determined to show she has not plateaued and can re-discover the promise she showed when younger.

With an arguably limited and shorter quality rotation and fewer standout star names than most other teams, it's tough to see Czech Republic making a deep run at this year's event. But on the flip-side, Coach Ptackova has done a fine job so far integrating some new players and the team has played with freedom and a real verve in preparation. If they can replicate some of that form, they might just spring a surprise and stop the rot of their last three lowly finishes.

Position: Small Forward
Date of Birth: 21/06/99
Place of Birth: Ceske Budejovice
Team 2022-23: ZVVZ USK Praha (Czech Republic-ZBL)

Vorackova is preparing to appear at her fourth edition of the FIBA Women's EuroBasket, even though she is only 23-years-old. This is set to be her biggest tournament yet and it needs to be. Previously she has not found her scoring touch at the event, but her nation needs her to show that she can compete at this level and be a difference-maker and leader. It feels like it is time for her to come alive and grab the opportunity.

She's shown with some big EuroLeague Women performances during past seasons with ZVVZ USK Praha that she can put points on the board against the biggest teams. While this past campaign was relatively quiet, on her day she can be the one to take Czech Republic to a win. If she can make some shots early, the confidence will flow and her team has a game-winner in their ranks.

ISRAEL

READY TO END LOSING STREAK

A full 12 years after their last appearance at the event, Israel look well placed to potentially make an impact on their belated return and make up for having missed five editions.

You have to turn the clock back 32 years to when they last won in the competition, taking down Czechoslovakia in a 91-90 thriller during the 1991 edition. They head into this year's event looking to snap a 20-game losing streak at the Final Round and might just have the roster to not only do that, but maybe push towards the Quarter-Finals.

While their ticket for this event was always guaranteed because of their status as co-hosts, the Qualifiers showed enough to suggest that they may be able to cause some problems, having completed a win double over Sweden and having also competed hard with Latvia.

Critically, Israel are not reliant on a main star player and can look to at least three or four of their players to make the big plays and carry the team when needed. Alyssa Baron can be a scoring machine and the guard is likely to be the most likely to hold the hot hand in this tournament having displayed her skills in EuroCup Women with Elitzur Landco Ramla as well as during the Qualifiers.

In the backcourt alongside her, Eden Rotberg was superb in the games against Sweden and Latvia, putting up 28 points in a clash with the latter. If she can replicate that kind of form, it could prove transformational for Israel's prospects.

One of the biggest reasons to be confident is through the all-action approach of Jennie Simms, who is a baller for all occasions and will just love this kind of platform to showcase her talent. Whether it is scoring, passing the rock or going to some serious work on the glass, she will truly be ready to do it all.

Alexandra Cohen will have to get through a lot of the dirty stuff in the paint, but her size in a team that is not exactly the tallest in the tournament is precious. She also has the capacity to score too, so will be another cog in an offensive machine that could surprise some observers if everything clicks into place.

Elsewhere on the roster, there may be an opportunity for the highly-rated teenage forward Yarden Garzon who has previously excelled during summer FIBA youth events. Garzon possesses the capability to transfer some of those elements to the senior team on her Final Round debut.

It's likely the effectiveness of the supporting cast being able to step onto the floor and make positive contributions that could be what determines Israel's finishing position. Even with some nice headline performers, the co-hosts will know they will only offer a punch worthy of note if it is a big team effort.

Extending their involvement beyond Tel Aviv and getting on the plane to Ljubljana would be the dream, although the first task is simply to snap that losing run and get a first victory on the board for more than three decades.

COACH Sharon DRUCKER

Nationality: Israeli

Place of Birth: Petah Tivka
Team 2022-23: Hapoel Haifa (Israel-Winner League)
International Career: Israel (2022-)

Jennie SIMMS

Height: 1.84
Position: Shooting Guard/Small Forward
Date of Birth: 21/04/94
Place of Birth: Maryland (USA)
Team 2022-23: Elitzur Holon (Israel-D1)

Simms rides into this tournament off the back of a breathtaking individual season when she was regularly on fire with Elitzur Holon and recorded some extraordinary numbers in EuroCup Women. Her do-it-all approach resulted in her averaging almost 20 points, 10 rebounds and 7 assists per outing, which gives a clear indication of her value to Israel as the co-hosts return for the first time since 2011.

Having a go-to baller like Simms who is instant offense and always ready to deliver in the clutch could be a huge difference-maker when it comes to Israel springing a surprise and potentially advancing beyond the Group stage. She will be top of the scouting list for Israel's opponents and she may have to deal with a lot of defensive attention, but she is smart enough to exploit that for the benefit of her teammates if it comes, so there's a lot to love with her on the roster.

A TOUGH BATTLE TO MAKE IT SIXTH TIME LUCKY?

After a jaw-dropping run of five consecutive Final defeats, France looked all set to end their silver streak and use their amazing talent and depth to be crowned champions for the first time since 2009.

Installed as the pre-tournament favorites and by some distance according to many observers, that viewpoint was diluted considerably when it was unexpectedly confirmed they would have to cope without big-hitters Marine Johannes and Gabby Williams.

Consequently, ending a staggering 14 years without the title just got a lot more difficult. But even without two of their leading lights, this is a France team stacked with talent. One that if it plays to its revised potential, should still be able to make a tilt at the title and anything less than a podium finish would be a considerable disappointment.

There is an extraordinary mix of youth and experience in this group of players and about as exciting a combination in this sense as any other team has in the competition.

The legendary Sandrine Gruda is preparing to step out at the event for the eighth time and she is third in the all-time scoring charts for the FIBA Women's EuroBasket. That is all you need to know about why her presence will be so important - especially when the team needs a cool head in the big moments. With her smooth as silk baseline jumper and physical presence, she can lock down the paint, while Helena Ciak also adds even more veteran know-how into the mix.

At the other end of the spectrum, it is the pupil still learning from the teacher in the shape of Iliana Rupert. Still only 21 years old and getting better and better with every tournament, she is a star in her own right now.

Rupert will be a big force with Gruda inside, either working in tandem or swapping as part of the center rotation. She is likely to post some leading performances for her team as she continues to learn from those around her.

On the wing, the team could be led at this event by Valeriane Vukosavljevic, a player who is arguably in the best form of her entire career right now and has the capacity to transform her national team contributions. In the past, the small forward has not always been able to shine, but this time she needs to reset the dial, step up and offer more of a scoring threat - something she is very capable of doing.

In the backcourt, there is tremendous responsibility on young gun Marine Fauthoux, who will continue her outstanding evolution. She has previous FIBA Women's EuroBasket experience on her resume already as well as Olympic and World Cup experiences, so she knows what it takes despite her young age. Fauthoux has added clutch to her game and can be trusted even in the most pressurized moments.

Throw in the likely presence of EuroLeague Women Young Player of the Year Pauline Astier, who is also coming into contention for minutes, and it illustrates what a tremendous blend France will have.

Getting an elusive first gold since 2009 can't be ruled out even if they are missing two heavyweight players and while it will be difficult, perhaps the one silver lining for France is that it might just reduce the previous weight of pressure and expectation.

Team 2022-23: ZVVZ USK Praha (Czech Republic-ZBL)

The time is now for the athletic wing to step up and cement her place as a leading light for France. With a couple of high-profile absences potentially impacting on the roster, her role and influence must be accelerated. Vukosavljevic has always made modest contributions, but now she could be the difference-maker for the team with her athleticism and ability to score inside and out.

Interestingly, the small forward has never posted a double-digit scoring return across any previous tournament and missed the FIBA Women's Basketball World Cup 2022 in Sydney, but looks primed to make a big step up for her side.

The 29-year-old comes into this edition of the tournament having played some of the best basketball of her life this past season in EuroLeague Women with ZVVZ USK Praha. If she can replicate this level of play, then it could help fuel a gold medal outcome for her country.

GERMANY

READY TO MAKE A SPLASH AFTER 12 YEARS AWAY?

It's been quite a wait, but having missed no fewer than five editions, Germany are ending their agonizing 12-year absence from Final Round action.

The last time they appeared was during 2011 in Poland when they bowed out at the group stage with losses to Spain, Montenegro and the hosts. With this in mind, perhaps the first target on their return will be to win their first game at this level since 2007.

The current players taking to the court can certainly take a lot of heart from the feat of those who went before them. Their predecessors posted a seismic level shock by taking down defending champions Czech Republic after holding them to less than 50 points.

As well as drawing some inspiration from the accomplishments of the relatively distant past, Germany's players will no doubt be excited and energized by the lure of playing on home soil at the FIBA Basketball World Cup 2026 after the recent hosting announcement.

It's one of the reasons their Final Round reunion is so important and maybe also why they have chosen to replace Walt Hopkins Jnr who oversaw their successful qualifying campaign with former Canada play-caller, Lisa Thomaidis.

Despite her experience of multiple global tournaments with her homeland, Thomaidis will be expecting a tough initiation. Although Germany have some uber-talented players, they are missing one of their biggest hitters in Satou Sabally and maybe also don't have the standout back-court performer of a EuroLeague Women standard that they might need for crunch time.

Despite this imbalance in depth comparing the backcourt to the front-court, what is most important is that they have some real game-winners and classy operators who can get it done.

Look no further than Leonie Fiebich. A player for all occasions, her versatility to handle the ball, rebound like crazy and score from inside or out, as well as guarding multiple positions means she will surely be the standout figure. Impressive in the Qualifiers and also in EuroCup Women last season with Casademont Zaragoza, Fiebich is the go-to for the team.

But she is not alone. Marie Guelich forms a potent double act, with the center having enjoyed a highly productive club campaign with Valencia Basket. Her power and prowess around the basket is always welcome and in punching Germany a ticket for this event, she shared a 26 point per game contribution to the team with Fiebich. With Luisa Geiselsoder, Ama Degbeon, Sonja Greinacher and maybe 21-year old rising star Emily Bessoir to also call upon, the rotation in the paint is impressive.

The experienced Svenja Brunckhorst did a good job in qualification with 5.5 assists per game and the 31-year-old will be a reference baller in the backcourt. But there is no getting away from the fact that they might need more scoring production from the guard and wing spots if they want to make a splash on their eagerly anticipated return.

While the outcome with the ball in the hands of their 'biggs' looks reassuringly predictable, their prospect of success could hinge on whether the likes of Brunckhorst, Emma Stach, and Alexandre Wilke for example can turn up the dial with some consistent scoring contributions. If they do, then Germany might just make some headlines.

A youth star for her country as part of an exciting and emerging generation, Fiebich now finds herself as a centerpiece at the senior level as Germany make their belated return to the Final Round having been absent for more than a decade.

Multi-talented and able to play multiple positions, it's normally on the wing that the 23-year-old is found, since that allows her to showcase her ball handling, scoring skills and then step up and use her size in the paint to score at the hoop and rack up big numbers on the glass.

While debuting at the event, fans have already seen her quality in the Qualifiers when she put up some big numbers in scoring and rebounding, as well as in EuroCup Women. Fiebich starred for Casademont Zaragoza, who made a deep run in the competition.

GREAT BRITAIN

EXPECT THE UNEXPECTED

The fact that Great Britain made a stunning, surprise and historic run to the Semi-Finals at the 2019 edition but then didn't even qualify at all in 2021 is an indicator as to why all outcomes this year are seriously possible - at the far ends of the spectrum.

Yes, the Brits could completely flop and not make it out of the Group Phase due to a modest level of preparation time, a lack of guard depth and limited experience in the squad of these events. On the flip-side, they could make another deep run, with some people having even labeled them as dark horses off the back of some new faces and the return of their leader Temi Fagbenle.

Their entire campaign seemed to have been hanging on whether the frontcourt ace would recover from the serious hand injury that curtailed her EuroLeague Women season with ZVVZ USK Praha, but Fagbenle is not only fit to play, she has been made captain. That is a rich reward for the standout figure and driving force behind their spectacular top four finish in Belgrade when she was the tournament's leading scorer and landed in the All-Star Five. You can expect her to lead the team in terms of points and rebounds, as well as being a big influence in the locker room.

Great Britain look particularly solid in the paint, with Fagbenle joined by Kristine Anigwe whose size, presence and skill is always welcome and she has the capacity to be a big force. Throw in the fact that the British Women's British Basketball League MVP Kiki Herbert Harrigan will make her debut and brings previous WNBA experience and there is a lot to love. She also adds strength and poise inside, with all three having played in EuroLeague or EuroCup Women - as well as Stateside.

Debuting players are certainly the theme, with Savannah Wilkinson getting ready to shine too. The forward is highly rated and has played in Qualifiers previously, but is now ready for the big show having posted an impressive College career. Smart and with a range of moves, she could be one of the ballers to watch if she gets some early confidence.

Similarly in the backcourt, there is massive excitement, potential and also a lot of responsibility on the shoulders of young Holly Winterburn. Exceptional for London Lions domestically and in EuroCup Women, she came alive in the last Qualifiers window to show what a massive talent she is. The guard has the ability to be a momentum-shifter with her scoring and creative ability. It's little wonder she has been listed as one of the tournament's rising stars to focus on.

Another player ready for a first FIBA Women's EuroBasket is Sydeny Wallace, the newly naturalized guard that could be the difference between an early flight home or extending the stay until the latter rounds of the competition. She may not have experience of the international stage but has veteran know-how from club level and if there is chemistry with her and Winterburn, it would be a huge boost to Great Britain's chances.

As with any team, the supporting cast will be important, while playcaller Chema Buceta will insist on his players wearing his famous 'positive glasses' in terms of their mentality. But as to how far they will go, it's truly anyone's guess.

Still very much the marquee player for Great Britain, Fagbenle brings immense quality and strength to their frontcourt. She was the pivotal figure when the underdogs made an amazing run to the Semi Finals in 2019, deservedly making the All-Star Five lineup in Belgrade after finishing the tournament's top scorer with more than 20 points per game.

As well as her scoring touch, Fagbenle is a big contribution on the glass and offers smarts alongside that power inside. She led the team in efficiency, scoring, rebounding and blocks during the Qualifying games and that speaks volumes about how her influence is still huge.

At club level, Fagbenle impressed in EuroLeague Women during this past season, helping ZVVZ USK Praha punch another Final Four ticket, having made a switch from CBK Mersin Yenisehir Bld – although a hand injury prematurely curtailed her involvement.

HOME HOPES IN THE BALANCE

This will be the fourth successive Final Round appearance for this year's co-hosts and in an ideal world it would provide Slovenia with the chance to excite home fans with a deep run and maybe even offer a first serious tilt at a podium finish.

Since their debut in 2017, they have never missed out on the big show and throughout that time have landed some impressive punches - despite not having an overly deep rotation or talent pool to utilize.

Heading into this competition, it's very much a case of whether the glass is viewed as being half full or half empty.

The positives are that they will have precious and passionate home support behind them, can beat anyone on their day, have some top class players to put on the floor, a starting five that work brilliantly together, the EuroLeague Women Coach of the Year in Georgios Dikaoulakos to mastermind their campaign, as well as some exciting rising stars now emerging.

On the flip side, the performances and results in the Qualifiers were up and down. They will also be without both Nika Baric and Shante Evans who have been an integral part in the rise to prominence, while forwards Marusa Senicar and Teja Gorsic are out injured. Collectively, these absences will impact what was already a shorter rotation than most other nations with similar ambitions.

Thankfully the spine of the team has three top drawer performers in captain and playmaker Teja Oblak who is a general in the backcourt, Zala Friskovec who can light it up from long-range on the wings and Eva Lisec who is an absolute handful for opponents under the basket.

Oblak will be particularly pivotal in this tournament. Her leadership on and off the court means a lot to the team, coaches and staff. She's played in all the big games previously with the national team, as well as at multiple Final Fours with ZVVZ USK Praha. With her ability to score, create and keep a cool head in the clutch, Oblak will be the reference player for Slovenia.

The three-point shooting of Friskovec could be the difference-maker and other teams will feature her prominently on their respective scouting reports after her superb season in EuroLeague Women with BC Polkowice.

Lisec is a warrior and kingpin in the paint. If she can find a high gear in these games then her contribution at both ends of the floor could be priceless. The center has consistently been one of Slovenia's best performers across their three previous Final Round appearances.

Elsewhere on the roster, Tina Jakovina is a rock in the small forward position, rising star Mojca Jelenc is improving all the time in the forward spot, with Aleksandra Kroselj an assured backcourt performer. Meanwhile teenage sensation Ajsa Sivka might just be able to follow in the tradition of players bursting onto the scene at Final Round, but it's a lot of expectation for a 17-year-old to deliver in this kind of situation - as brilliant as she is.

Trying to weigh up all the complicated factors makes it difficult to sketch out what the realistic prospects for Slovenia actually are. But surely the only agreeable conclusion for most people is that home hopes are hanging intriguingly and tantalizingly in the balance.

Ever since Slovenia made their debut in 2017, Oblak has been one of the main turbos behind the co-hosts rising up on the big stage. As they contemplate their fourth successive edition, their 'Captain Fantastic' continues to be the reference point for the team on and off the court.

A born leader, Oblak has established herself as one of the most respected and accomplished guards in EuroLeague Women, helping ZVVZ USK Praha to another Final Four this past season. Her composure, ability to create for teammates or score big buckets all over the floor will now be transferred to a national team vest. Her calm and assured approach will be absolute gold dust for the co-hosts, who will be under big pressure to perform well on home soil. Oblak makes the team tick and if she can find her usual high gear then Slovenia might make the deep run they crave.

HUNGARY

ALL OPTIONS OPEN FOR AMBITIOUS HUNGARY

Potentially a dark horse for a shot at the Quarter-Finals or maybe even beyond, Hungary will also know that they will have to be focused to avoid an early exit from the competition at the Group Phase.

All options are open and it feels like this is the case because Hungary has enough talent to go on a nice run, but not enough top class depth or big-time clutch ballers for any days off. Consequently, they can be ambitious but it will be intriguing to see if they will over deliver or under deliver.

One thing they do have heavily in their favor is a terrific frontcourt rotation that is full of size, strength and ability. Leading the way is Bernadett Hatar. Standing at over two meters tall and back from a serious injury that ruled her out for much of the 2022-23 club campaign, the center will be a tower of strength. She will work in the high post, mop up any putback scores down low, dominate the glass and swat some shots.

The terrific work of Virag Kiss in the past two years has also added to Hungary's effectiveness inside. She was superb in EuroCup Women with NKA Universitas PEAC and now Kiss will be looking to continue her good form into this Final Round. Throw the naturalized Cyesha Goree into the mix and it is among one of the best interior rotations in the tournament.

The wing spot will be filled by Reka Lelik who is a go-to player for Hungary and willing to use her skills in the decisive moments. She can make big shots and is normally the player with something of an 'X-Factor' feel. When Lelik is playing well, normally that translates into her team playing well too.

Agnes Studer has shown in EuroLeague Women in these past seasons that she has matured a lot and will be directing traffic from the point guard position. It gives her a platform to underline that she can still take more steps upwards and establish herself as one of the premier guards in the competition, while Dora Ruff-Nagy has deputized nicely in the preparation games.

And, that preparation phase has been highly impressive and included a win-double against Slovenia, as well as taking down tournament favorites Spain.

On the one hand, Hungary perhaps didn't have as much to do in their qualifying campaign as most other nations, managing to beat Iceland and Romania twice to advance. But on the flip-side, even though they lost to Spain twice, they did give a good account of themselves in both games and then third time lucky, beat them in their last friendly game recently.

Missing out on the 2021 edition, the main task was to get themselves back to the Final Round table. But now that they're here, why not make some noise? They grabbed that Quarter-Finals ticket on their last visit in 2019 and could be on course for repeating that feat.

Having not long returned back to action after being sidelined for almost a year with a serious injury, Hungary will welcome their giant center with open arms as she gets ready to play her usual leading role in the team. Her sheer height is obviously a massive advantage, but Hatar is about so much more than that. She is such a good mover for her size and executes the pick and roll so, so well. Presenting the kind of matchup headache for her opponents that few other players can, she will exploit the offensive glass for putback scores and generally be a ready made bucket in the paint. Four years ago when Hungary last featured at the Final Round and made the Quarter-Finals, Hatar led Hungary in efficiency, points, rebounds and blocks. Another similar performance at this 2023 edition would be an amazing boost to her team.

SERBIA

CHAMPIONS WILL FIGHT TO PROTECT THEIR CROWN

Nobody expected Serbia to make history in 2015 when they became champions for the first time and even fewer thought they could or would make it two FIBA Women's EuroBasket titles when they landed in Valencia – but they did.

Two years later and nobody probably truly expects Serbia to hang onto their precious crown, but they just love to prove the doubters wrong. Critically, they still have the appetite, talent and of course the revered head coach in Marina Maljkovic to make a strong run and fight for the podium once again.

Yes, they don't have the legendary Sonja Vasic who deservedly took MVP honors at the 2021 edition, or the brilliance of the long-serving Jelena Brooks. But even when they were without both of these gigantic performers and another top player in Aleksandra Crvendakic at the FIBA Basketball World Cup 2022, they still made a big impression and got impressive results.

Coach Maljkovic spent months in preparation for Sydney, often talking about the need for Serbia to move on with their new generation and there is no doubt they did. But after the arrival of some new faces, the playcaller is pushing those members on whether they truly have the killer instinct and desire to go the extra distance needed for Serbia to continue pushing for honors.

In some ways, the talk of a new generation takes away some of the attention from the fact that the spine of the team is still brilliant and has so much experience of the historical highs that have peppered their nation's recent rise.

Yvonne Anderson has been terrific for her adopted country and comes into this tournament having excelled with Tango Bourges Basket – so much so that she made the 2023 All-EuroLeague Women Team.

At the other end of the floor, Tina Krajsnik is a warrior and made of steel, meaning Serbia does not have to worry about the work getting done under either basket. Not just a powerful physical presence, the center is a leader and will make the noise in the big games when her team needs it most.

Playing in between Anderson will be the smart wing and forward play of Crvendakic who should be back after missing the Worlds with injury. She took CBK Mersin Yenisehir Bld to a historical first ever Final Four in EuroLeague Women and she knows she needs to step up now that Brooks and Vasic are no longer balling in national team jerseys.

The supporting cast is also so adept at making telling contributions, not least Nevena Jovanovic who made so many clutch plays down the stretch at the 2021 edition, while it is telling that Coach Maljkovic almost always has her in the team for crunch time.

The sharp-shooting of Sasa Cado from long-range will also remain highly productive, meaning that most of the question marks will surround those newer members of the roster who must show they can produce consistently. Ballers like Jovana Nogic for example, who caught the eye in Sydney.

The simple message is that writing off Serbia is never an option. All possibilities remain open, from falling short to getting yet another medal and who knows, maybe even a third title. Is it really that unrealistic?

KEY PLAYER

Position: Small Forward
Date of Birth: 17/03/96
Place of Birth: Loznica
Team 2022-23: CBK Mersin Yenisehir Bld (Turkey-KBSL)

The transition from being a prominent and important player to an actual leader of this team was delayed for Crvendakic when she was unable to participate at the FIBA Women's Basketball World Cup 2022 in Sydney. However, it's now time for the forward to turn up the dial in terms of her role, since this Serbia team needs to turn the page as they defend the title they won two years ago.

Without the legendary Sonja Vasic and Jelena Brooks, Serbia needs other players for the clutch moments and certainly, Crvendakic can answer the call. Her ability to make big shots from outside and pull great moves inside is vital and she showed her class for Serbia in the qualifying games.

She comes into this edition having also inspired CBK Mersin Yenisehir to their first EuroLeague Women Final Four and indeed their maiden Final.

SLOVAKIA

THE SAME UNDERDOG STATUS AS USUAL

Almost every time in recent memory that Slovakia have stepped out at the Final Round they have been written off and deemed to be rank outsiders with no chance of making any kind of impression.

This year is no different. Perhaps one of the reasons being that they effectively punched their ticket off the back of wins against Switzerland and Luxembourg, with some observers pointing out that this was not exactly the stiffest of tests in the qualifiers.

To be fair, Slovakia did push group winners Italy hard in the first meeting which ended up as just a one-shot game. Additionally, you only have to go back six years to show what is possible when they made a surprise and impressive run to the Quarter-Finals.

Being underdogs won't bother head coach Juraj Suja or his players. It's such a well-worn label that it will probably only serve to galvanize the group as they look to replicate 2017 and spring some upsets.

With arguably less firepower than most of their rivals, defense will be a big part of their strategy and if they disrupt opposing offenses well, they will have the opportunity to potentially win games.

But it will be tough and leading the way will be playmaker Barbora Wrzesinski who has been the leader for some time and her backcourt play in controlling the tempo will be so precious. She knows what it takes to perform at the highest level having been at ZVVZ USK Praha in recent seasons when they have made back to back EuroLeague Women Final Four tournaments.

Miroslava Mistinova really came alive in the Qualifiers and the winger's scoring ability and do-it-all mentality will be a big boost if she can continue the momentum. She is also a baller for crunch time if Slovakia do manage to stay in contention during games.

She can also line up in the shooting guard slot and can rotate nicely with Terezia Palenikova who has played this past season in the highly competitive Spanish League, starting with Tenerife and finishing with EuroLeague Women side Girona.

Sabina Oroszova will look to turn up the dial in the frontcourt and will play a lot of minutes in the paint, while Ivana Jakubcova was excellent in the qualifiers. Her scoring and rebounding really gave the team a great foundation to build from.

The rest of the cast also have hugely important roles to play and this group should have enough experience to make people sit up and take notice and show they need to be respected.

Two years ago in Valencia, much of this team stung Belarus, a nation that in the same tournament beat the then reigning champions and co-hosts Spain, eventually riding their way to the Semi-Finals. It showed that on their day, Slovakia can get it done.

Yes, they're underdogs probably by their own admission, but if you don't turn up with your 'A-game', then expect to get bitten.

Club Team 2022-23: ZVVZ USK Praha (Czech Republic-ZBL)

A classy playmaker who has done some excellent things for her country throughout her career and also since a young age, Wrzesinski is back at the Final Round with Slovakia for the first time since 2017, having missed 2021 with an injury. The last time she played at the main event, the guard was typically influential and led her country with more than 12 points and 4 assists per game as they made a surprise run to the Quarter-Finals.

Her composure, experience and leadership in the backcourt will be a huge benefit to Slovakia this time around too, with Wrzesinski able to step up in the big moments and take control of the tempo when they need to. She has got great club experience too, recently participating at the EuroLeague Women Final Four with ZVVZ USK Praha.

TURKEY

READY TO START CLIMBING UPWARDS AGAIN?

It's been an undeniably lean six years or so for Turkey who had previously established themselves as a major power when famously reaching a maiden Final in 2011 and then also landing bronze in 2013.

They even played at the 2016 Olympics in Rio, but since then, it has been a steady decline and one that everyone associated with Turkish basketball would love to reverse.

Even in 2017 when they did still make the Quarter-Finals, they suffered a humiliating blowout at the hands of arch rivals Greece and have since posted uninspiring finishes of 14th at subsequent editions.

The big question is whether they are now set to turn the curve upside down and switch it from illustrating a steady decline to the start of a movement heading skywards again – just like the good old days.

One of the key elements of those halcyon times when they stood on the podium steps was having some truly top class players, such as the legendary duo of Nevriye Yilmaz and Birsnel Vardarli Demirmen. Heading into this year's edition, the presence of the naturalized Teaira McCowan may resurrect that ability to throw the ball into someone who can do some special things.

Even if the center might not take an incredible clutch shot or hand out a stunning assist like those marquee players who went before her, she can put up some seriously special numbers. The kind of towering double-doubles that will give Turkey the platform to take on anyone. The big caveat being that she has been unable to play during preparation because of an injury and the team are sweating on her ability to win her fitness race to be ready for the tournament.

Of course, it takes a whole lot more than one player to deliver Final Round success. But luckily Turkey are likely to have Tilbe Senyurek alongside her in the paint, with the forward having rejuvenated her career by playing in Poland and in EuroCup Women after she had endured some serious injuries.

Now playmaker and recently crowned EuroLeague Women champion Olcay Cakir Turgut is also leaving her homeland to play abroad after penning a deal with Perfumerias Avenida. Spreading her wings is an interesting factor and she will be a massively important performer as usual in this competition.

One backcourt blow is not having Pelin Bilgic lining up alongside her, since she led the way in assists during the Qualifiers and her absence could be telling.

Yet for Turkey to turn the corner, stop the rot and get back to climbing the tournament ladder again, they need more from their roster and that continues to be the unknown. The know-how of veteran center Esra Ural Topuz will be useful to a group containing a few inexperienced players, but there are not a load of strong offensive contributors and that is an issue.

Someone else needs to have a breakout tournament and really step up alongside McCowan, Senyurek and Cakir Turgut otherwise you might argue Turkey will be the most predictable team present at the FIBA Women's EuroBasket 2023.

KEY

Height: 2.04
Position: Center
Date of Birth: 28/09/96
Place of Birth: Texas (USA)
Team 2022-23: Galatasaray Cagdas Factoring (Turkey-KBSL)

A walking double-double in any game, McCowan is a towering presence and nightmare for opposing defenses because of her sheer size alone. Joining Turkey during the last qualifying windows, the center made an instant impression with some eye-bulging numbers in points and rebounds. This also reflected her stellar work in taking Galatasaray to the EuroCup Women 2023 Finals, picking up multiple monthly MVP accolades along the way.

A nightmare matchup for any team, she will clean up on the glass, convert an array of putback scores, exploit the pick and roll and drop anchor defensively in the paint too. McCowan is likely to be Turkey's marquee player in this campaign and it would be a shock if she did not produce some epic performances for her adopted country.

The field for FIBA Women's EuroBasket 2023 was finalized following the conclusion of the Qualifiers. Played over three windows in November 2021, November 2022 and February 2023, the Qualifiers saw the European national teams compete for places in the 39th edition of the continent's flagship women's basketball event.

With co-hosts Israel and Slovenia qualified automatically, the rest of the 16-team field was completed by the 10 group winners and four best-ranked second-placed teams. Belgium, Czech Republic, France, Greece, Italy, Latvia, Montenegro, Serbia, Spain and Turkey booked their tickets as winners of their respective groups, while Germany, Great Britain, Hungary and Slovakia were the four runners-up to qualify.

*Israel and Slovenia were qualified for the Final Round automatically as hosts

All second-placed teams were ranked according to the Official Basketball Rules, with results against fourth-placed teams disregarded in all groups of four for purposes of the ranking.

As approved by the FIBA Europe Board, runners-up from Group F and Group I were not in contention to qualify as the best second-placed teams as a consequence of the decision to withdraw Belarus and Russia from the FIBA Women's EuroBasket 2023 Qualifiers.
