

Cell Membrane: Bilayer With Receptor

DID YOU KNOW?

The membrane is a thin layer that surrounds all cells to keep the inside of the cell separate from the outside. One of its jobs is to control what can enter and exit the cell through passages called channels. It also contains structures called receptors, which allow cells to “talk” to each other.

